Eisenhower Backs Patton; Senate Wants More Data

Eisenhower's Statement

The text of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's report on the Patton incident, obtained from Secretary of War Stimson and submitted to the Senate yesterday by its Military Committee, follows:

"During the Sicilian campaign General Patton was the mainspring of the effort during the sustained drive of the Seventh Army from Gela all the way to Messina. He absolutely refused to accept procrastination or any excuses for delay with a resulting rapid advance of that army which had much to do with the early collapse of resistance in Sicily.

"He drove himself as hard as he did the members of his army throughout the campaign and consequently became almost ruthless in his demands upon individual men. While visiting wounded in hospitals in two instances he encountered unwounded patients who had been evacuated for what is commonly known as 'battle anxiety,' specifically nerve difficulty. Also, one man had a temperature. He momentarily lost his temper in these two instances and in an unseemly and indefensible manner upbraided the individuals, and in one of the cases cuffed the individual involved so that the man's helmet rolled off his head.

Got Reports From Newsmen

"These incidents were first reported officially to me by a medical officer, this report being followed by reports from three reputable newspapermen. Prior to receiving the report from the pressmen I took the following action:

"First, to General Patton I wrote a letter advising him of the allegations, expressing my extreme displeasure, and informing him that any repetition would result in his instant relief. Further, I told him that he would necessarily make, on his own initiative to the individuals involved, amends, and, if necessary, take the necessary steps to make proper amends before his whole Army. I also told him that I would reserve decision affecting his relief from command of the Army until I could determine the effect of his own corrective action.

"Second, the problem before me was whether the incidents as reported were sufficiently damaging to Patton and to his standing in his Army to compel me to relieve him, thus losing to the United Nations his unquestioned value as commander of an assault force, or whether less drastic measures would be appropriate. I sent another general officer to Sicily and made a short visit there myself for the purpose of determining whether or not any resentment existed in the Seventh Army against General Patton.

Patton's Action

"The following action was taken by Patton: He personally sought out the individuals involved and the persons who were present at the time the incidents took place. To these he made full apologies which it was reported to me were accepted. In addition, he visited each and every division in the Seventh Army and called together all officers to whom he registered his regret that he should have been guilty of any conduct which could be considered unfair or un-American. The officers of these divisions in turn relayed this message to the enlisted men.

"The measures taken by Patton were discussed by me with the three newspapermen who reported the incident, and apparently they were convinced that the measures taken were adequate in the circumstances. On top of all this I sent the theater inspector general to make a thorough inspection of the Seventh Army with the particular mission of determining whether or not there existed on that force any general resentment against Patton. The inspector general reported to me that while there was more or less general knowledge that incidents of the character described had taken place, the men themselves felt that General Patton had done a splendid over-all job and no great harm had been done.

Believes in Patton's Usefulness

"In this connection it must be remembered that, while the conduct of Patton in these specific cases was indefensible and resented by every officer who knew of it, Patton has in thousands of cases personally supported, encouraged and sustained individuals. The net result was that throughout the Sicilian campaign the Seventh Army had a high morale. I personally supervised this investigation throughout and took those steps that seemed applicable in the circumstances because I believe that General Patton has a great field of usefulness in any assault where loyalty, drive and gallantry on the part of the Army commander will be essential.

"General Smith had a press conference yesterday with all of the representatives of the press and explained the essentials of the entire story as given above. This was done because of reports of the publication in the United States of exaggerated versions of the story.

"In this connection I commend the great body of American newspapermen in this theater because all of them knew something of the facts involved and some of them knew all, including the corrective action taken and the circumstances that tended to ameliorate the obvious injustice of Patton's acts. These men chose to regard the matter as one in which the high command acted for the best interests of the war effort and let the matter rest there. To them I am grateful.

"Summing the matter up: It is true that General Patton was guilty of reprehensible conduct with respect to two enlisted men. They were both suffering from a nervous disorder and one man in the case had a temperature. Following an exhaustive investigation, including a personal visit to Sicily, I decided that the corrective action as described above was suitable in the circumstances and adequate. I still believe that this decision was sound. Finally it has been reported many times to me that in every recent public appearance of Patton before any crowd composed of his own soldiers he is greeted by thunderous applause."

It's Still Hot

By Robert C. Albright

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday informed the War Department that Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton was guilty of "reprehensible conduct" in encounters with two hospitalized enlisted men, but that corrective action taken "was suitable in the circumstances and adequate."

Eisenhower's official report on the Sicilian incident was telegraphed to the War Department, forwarded to the Senate Military Committee by Secretary of War Stimson and later read to the Senate by Chairman Robert R. Reynolds.

The Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean theater told how he personally warned Patton against any repetition of his offense, exacted apologies and sent his area inspector general to study morale of Patton's troops before retaining the tough old general in command of his Seventh Army.

Believes Decision Sound

"I still believe that this decision was sound," Eisenhower advised the War Department.

The Senate Military Committee sped the report to the Senate, but in a brief executive session decided informally to further question the War Department about certain aspects of the case.

It was learned that at least three questions will be asked before the committee meets next week to consider possible action on Patton's pending promotion from colonel to the permanent rank of major general.

The committee will inquire (1) why the War Department first denied Patton had been reprimanded (2) whether there were more than two clashes between the general and hospitalized men, and (3) whether any other generals in Eisenhower's command have been involved in similar incidents?

Reaction Favorable

Reaction to Eisenhower's report was generally favorable in the Senate, with many members of the committee commending his unvarnished recital of the facts, but Chairman Reynolds said the case "is by no means closed."

Reynolds said the committee thought it best to wait a week before taking any conclusive action. He said committee members will get the views of fellow Senators, House members and the general public before passing on Patton's promotion.

General Eisenhower paid tribute to Patton as "the mainspring" of the Seventh Army's rapid drive across Sicily to Messina. He expressed reluctance to lose to the United Nations "his unquestioned value as commander of an assault force" and voiced belief that the

Butler Blasts U. S. Policy in Latin Nations

By Mary Spargo

A blistering attack upon what he called U. S. dollar diplomacy" and New Deal "boondoggling" in Latin America was launched in the Senate yesterday by Senator Butler (Republican) of Nebraska, setting off a train of repercussions which is expected to wind up in a full fledged congressional investigation.

Butler, who was answered yesterday by Vice President Wallace, Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, acting chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of the Office of International Affairs, charged that in the last two years 30 or 40 different United States agencies have expended approximately six billion dollars of American taxpayers funds in a dubious attempt to implement the Good Neighbor policy.

Some of the repercussions to his charges were:

1. Vice President Wallace called newsmen to his office as Butler concluded reading from the 176-page report of his summer tour of 20 Latin-American countries, and read an apology to "our Latin-American allies" for the "shocking slur."
2. At an American Legion dinner here last night Rockefeller

District Boards Ready to Draft Prewar Dads

District draft boards will be compelled to induct pre-Pearl Harbor fathers after Tuesday, Director William E. Leahy said last night.

Two weeks ago local draft officials announced that no prewar fathers would be called in November, but warned they could make no promises for December.

In the last three years more than 45,000 District men have been drafted and about 22,000 others have volunteered, Leahy said.

Recent inductions have been controlled so that all of the District's 25 boards will exhaust their supply of nonfathers at about the same time, Leahy said.

Consequently all boards will begin calling the fathers at about the same time in December, but the exact date has not been determined.

Hunter Apparently Squeezed to Death By Bear He Shot

West Townsend, Vt., Nov. 26 (AP).—Apparently squeezed to death by a bear, the body of Carl Herrick, 37-year-old hunter missing since Tuesday, was found today in woods by his cousin, Forrest Hewitt.

Woodsmen reconstructed the hunter's death as follows:

Herrick apparently thought he had killed the bear after firing once at him and advanced 70 yards to dress the animal after placing his rifle against the tree.

The bear apparently grabbed him as he approached. There were a few scratches on the hunter's arms, hands and face, but the blackened condition of his face indicated that the bear's huge paws had snuffed out Herrick's life.

Walsh Appointed To U. S. Senate

Gov. Charles Edison of New Jersey yesterday appointed Arthur Walsh, Democrat, to succeed the late W. Warren Barbour, Republican, as United States Senator.

Walsh is an executive vice president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and a member of the Port of New York Authority.

Names Mixed, Seaman Rides Like Admiral

Guadalcanal, Nov. 27 (AP).—Robert Vandegrift, a young yeoman attached to the South Pacific press relations office, went to the landing today to board a flying boat on an assigned trip. To his surprise he was met by a launch and crew reserved for admirals and generals.

The crew thought they were picking up a more prominent Vandegrift — Lieut. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift, the Marine commander.

Yeoman Vandegrift, clad in dungarees, got the ride anyway.

Soviets Advance 8 Miles Past City; Foe Flees Along 50-Mile Corridor

London, Saturday, Nov. 27 (AP). Russian armies captured the Nazi stronghold of Gomel yesterday and stormed on eight miles beyond the city in pursuit of hundreds of thousands of Germans retreating through a 50-mile-wide corridor toward Minsk.

"Large enemy forces were routed" from the last Nazi bastion east of the Dnieper river when the Russians first disorganized German defenses and then charged in with a "daring outflanking maneuver," Moscow announced. Great quantities of materiel were captured.

Sweeping in pursuit, the Russians reached the railway station of Kostyukovka on the line the Germans were following back to Zhlobin, Bobruisk and Minsk in western White Russia.

The Russians announced that more than 7000 Germans were killed in the widespread fighting that stretched from the Gomel area south to the Dnieper Bend.

Stalin Announces Fall

The fall of Gomel, guardian of the road to Poland, was announced by Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin a few hours after the Germans declared they had destroyed the town and fallen back.

Later the Moscow midnight communique gave added details of the fighting that turned the area north, south and west of Gomel into a seething battlefield through which the Russians were sending at least three columns in various directions to snare the 20 German divisions in the area.

Two Red army columns were forming a pincers which threatened to nip off the railroad at Zhlobin.

Nazis Reported Rushing Aid

The Paris radio said the Germans were trying to rush reserves into the area to hold the escape gap, but said "they were being delayed considerably by bad weather."

The new offensive in the north, where the Red Army poured through a 37-mile-wide gap in the German lines toward the upper Dnieper, wheeled through over 30 towns and hamlets despite furious German resistance.

The Germans said the offensive was now spread along a solid 100 miles north of Gomel.

Meanwhile, in the Kiev bulge where the Germans were counter-attacking in strength, the Russians for the third straight day fought the Germans to a standstill in the Korosten, Chernyakhov and Brusilov sectors.

The German radio admitted a check in the Kiev counterattack, explaining that it was "suspended mainly owing to mud" and that not only mud and cold hampers the Greatest U. S. Armada Gives North Sea Port 107th Pounding

No Breathing Spell

By Robert N. Sturdevant

London (Saturday), Nov. 27 (AP). The greatest armada of U. S. Eighth Air Force heavy bombers ever to take the air—with their escorts totaling close to 1000 planes—blasted the German North Sea port of Bremen and targets in northern France yesterday, and a few hours later the Germans announced that the RAF raided battered Berlin last night for the fifth night in a row.

Heavy opposition was encountered by the American bombing force, which included both Flying Fortresses and Liberators, and the attackers lost 39 planes, 29 of them heavy bombers. A total of 56 German planes were shot down. American and RAF fighters escorted the U. S. bomber force.

The official announcement of the operations—which followed a heavy RAF night smash at industrial Frankfurt-am-Main and a Thursday night Mosquito stab as fire-blackened Berlin—said that the "largest force" of British-based American heavy bombers ever employed in a daylight assault gave Bremen, an important industrial city of 375,000 people, its 107th raid of the war.

Fighters Set New Record

The force of heavy bombers used against Bremen yesterday exceeded the previous record group, estimated unofficially at 500 or more, which cascaded tons of high explosives on Wilhelmshaven on November 3.

Of the 56 German planes shot down, escorting fighter planes set a new record by accounting for 36, and the bombers got 20. The previous high for U. S. Eighth Air Force Thunderbolts and Lightnings was 25 German planes destroyed in the Kassel raid on July 30.

Three great fleets of Britain's heaviest bombers thundered out last night toward Europe. One RAF force went over the British east coast and the other two crossed the coast at points in the southeast. A southeast coast observer said one bomber group took 45 minutes to cross.

The German overseas radio claimed that 15 RAF bombers were shot down and that the list still was rising from heavy attacks by German night fighters along the route, and particularly in the Berlin area.

Savage Sea, Air Blasting Helped Marines Win Atoll

By Henry Keys

London Daily Express War Correspondent

(Distributed by International News Service by Special Permission. World Copyright, 1943, by London Daily Express.)

With U. S. Marines at Tarawa, Nov. 23 (Delayed).—Ruthless, overwhelming sea and air power, ruthlessly applied, and bloody, determined but costly fighting by United States Marines wrested from the Japanese their coral atoll fortress and airbase at Betio, which fell to us today.

Never before has the world seen, or human beings experienced, such appalling punishment as has been meted out to Betio's enemy garrison of 4000 men since Saturday morning.

Warships of all types, from battleships carrying 16-inch guns to destroyers, have rained a torrent of more than 2200 tons of shells on this tiny, 540-acre atoll.

Aircraft have plastered it with 700 tons of bombs, many of them 2000 pounders, and strafed it with a million rounds of 50-caliber explosive bullets.

I have watched this awesome battle for four terrible days, a battle that has turned this one-time pleasant little isle into a living hell.

There has been little time to dispose of the dead and even as I write this the stench of death hangs sickeningly over Betio.

Mutilated Bodies Float in Lagoon

Mutilated bodies float in the lagoon among the barges, and enemy dead—bloated and ugly—lie ignored under the fierce equatorial sun.

A few snipers are still active and rifle and machine-gun bullets are flying across the island in all directions.

Two hundred yards away, a Marine flamethrower is viciously discharging a searing flame into an enemy blockhouse.

The cumulative effect of so much sea and air power was breathtaking.

Battleships, carriers, cruisers and destroyers were everywhere. The scene at the embarkation base was impressive, for there was gathered the largest force of naval vessels and transports ever assembled in the Pacific.

It was in vivid contrast to the miniature invasion forces which I had accompanied in the Solomons.

We were many days at sea, our course being designed to confuse the enemy should we be spotted. I sailed aboard the battleship that was the flagship of Rear Admiral Harry W. Hill, amphibious commander for the Tarawa landings. Enemy submarines and patrol planes were frequently reported and once a four-engined Japanese bomber was shot down in flames by our combat patrol.

There was another amphibious force under Rear Admiral Turner

Island Battle Called Toughest In History of Marine Corps

By Richard W. Johnston

Representing the Combined American Press (Distributed by the Associated Press)

With The U. S. Marine Assault Forces at Tarawa, Nov. 23 (Delayed).—Bloody, bandaged heroes of the United States Marines have broken the back of this lizard-shaped Japanese Gibraltar of the Gilbert Islands today after 60 hours of the toughest fighting in the century and a half history of the corps.

The Jap soldiers are not surrendering, but are beginning to commit harakiri. However, there is every indication they will fight to the end from strong positions and that many more American boys will die before the last Japs are driven from Tarawa.

No victory in American military history was ever attained at a higher price.

(Secretary of the Naxy Knox said last night our losses on Tarawa were "very heavy," although the total would be less than 4000 men. Details on Page 2.)

Col. Merritt A. Edson of Marine raider fame, chief of staff of Maj. Gen. Julian C. Smith of Elkton, Md., commander of the Second Marine Division, said "this is the toughest fight in the Marine Corps history. Nothing in any previous war or this one can compare with it."

Carlson on Hand

Lieut. Col. Evans Carlson, himself a famous leader of Marine raiders in their exploits on Makin Island and Guadalcanal last year, is here as an observer. "Guadalcanal was something," he said, "but I never saw anything like this."

There is no official count of casualties, but Colonel Edson reported that only a few hundred men of two battalions (about 1000 men) thrown into the inner beachhead attack were neither dead nor wounded. Dead Japs are everywhere—in blockhouses, in the surf and scattered among tattered palm fronds which they have used incessantly as cover for sniping.

The assault was made against three designated beaches by three battalion landing teams going shoreward through a lagoon on the north coast of the fortified air base island of the Tarawa atoll.

They encountered ferocious fire from Jap shore batteries and emplacements, of which few were affected by the air bombing and naval shelling.

A shelving reef hung up most of the Higgins boats and wave after wave of infantry had to struggle 500 yards through water neck deep under a murderous Japanese barrage. At low tide many of their bodies dot the reef.

General Smith and most of his staff were blown out of a boat when they attempted to circle the west tip of the island and land a regimental headquarters. The general was rescued by an amphibious tractor obtained by Maj. R. M. C. Thompkins, who waded half a mile through water chest deep under Jap

Aussies Take Sattelberg In New Guinea

By Murlin Spencer

Southwest Allied Headquarters (Saturday) Nov. 27 (AP).—Sattelberg Village on a 2400-foot spur overlooking New Guinea's Huon Gulf—from whose coast Gen. Douglas MacArthur is in position to invade New Britain—was stormed and captured Friday by Australians who strewed the high ground with dead Japanese and seized much war equipment.

The Japanese survivors retreated north along the Wareo trail after yielding their first major point in the area since the fall of Finschhafen, 8 miles to the southeast, on October 2.

The victory, achieved by Australians who had to overcome the most difficult type of mountain and dense jungle in addition to fierce enemy resistance, brought to a close military operations which started September 21 with a landing on the coast north of Finschhafen.

The series of assaults culminating in Sattelberg's capture started November 17 when medium tanks were thrown into action.

Double Envelopment

Double envelopment, plus a direct frontal assault, was the strategy used. The Aussies closed in until the Japanese defenses virtually were surrounded with the northern jungle trail the only possible means of escape.

The three Aussie forces, supplied throughout the campaign by American amphibious engineers, moved on the village from Kumawa, to the south, Jivivaning, to the southeast, and Palanko to the northeast.

Airmen Hand Nazis Terrific Beating in Italy

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Nov. 26 (AP).—Hammered by daylong relays of American and British fighter-bombers, Nazi troops have been sharply repulsed in every onslaught against Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army, which improved its 5-mile-long bridgehead across the Sangro River near Italy's Adriatic coast.

The enemy's fierce counterattacks slackened considerably, an official announcement said today, due largely to the demoralizing effect of thousands of antipersonnel fragmentation bombs flung from the air on German troop concentrations and trenches.

Shaken Nazi prisoners blamed the ceaseless aerial pounding for the fact that Montgomery's veterans were able to consolidate and enlarge their bridgehead and pour reinforcements and essential supplies across the flooded Sangro. Enemy gun emplacements in the hills northwest of the stream continued to shell the Eighth's trenches and supply lines, however.

Win New Heights in Center

Near the middle of the Italian front, Eighth Army units won new heights northwest of Castel di Sangro.

Activity on the Fifth Army front on the western half of the line was limited to two violent 15-minute artillery duels as rain and mist reduced visibility virtually to zero.

It was disclosed that the American Forty-fifth Division, made up largely of troops from Colorado, Oklahoma and New Mexico and containing more than 1000 South-

47 Jap Planes Bagged in Raid On Formosa Port

Chungking (Saturday), Nov. 27 (AP).—Allied planes blasted the port city of Shinchiku on the northwest coast of Formosa on Thanksgiving Day and destroyed 47 Japanese planes, a record number in this theater, it was announced here today.

Of the Japanese planes destroyed, at least 12 were declared to have been shot down in aerial dogfights, while all the Allied planes returned safely. It was the first American raid on Formosa.

(First announcement of the Formosa raid was made yesterday by the Tokyo radio. Formosa, 90 miles off China and some 200 miles north of the Philippines, was one of the Japanese bases for air attacks during the invasion of the Philippines.)

Fleet Doubled Since Jan. 1; 745 Jap Ships Sunk to Date

7 Freighters, Tanker And Plane Transport Are Latest Victims

By Thomas A. Reedy

Associated Press Staff Writer

Surging U. S. sea and air forces in the Pacific have sunk Japanese shipping at the almost incredible rate of a vessel a day since Pearl Harbor.

Latest victims in the war of attrition were seven freighters, a tanker and a plane transport sunk by wide-ranging U. S. submarines.

These new sinkings, announced yesterday by the Navy, brought the submarine toll of sunk, probably sunk and damaged Japanese ships to 505.

The Navy reported that all its forces now have definitely sent 745 of all types of Nippon shipping to the bottom in little more than 700 days of warfare . . . A rate considered far beyond the Tokyo admiralty's ability to replace.

Like ground troops exploiting a breakthrough at a weak point, the Navy simultaneoly arranged for even greater submarine activity. It urged volunteers from other branches to join special training classes for sub duty at New London, Conn., perhaps to meet the demands brought on by a rising tide of submarine launchings.

As pointed out Thursday by Kirke L. Simpson's war interpretive column for the Associated Press, there should be still better

Navy Now Has 817 Combatant Vessels In All, Knox Reveals

Secretary Knox said yesterday that the number of fighting ships in the United States fleet has been doubled since last January 1 and that the new ships completed this year include more than 40 aircraft carriers.

The American Navy, it was disclosed, now totals 817 combatant ships—battleships, carriers, cruisers, destroyers, destroyer-escorts and submarines—plus thousands of the auxiliary, patrol, mine and landing vessels.

Completion of the new aircraft carrier Wasp at noon Wednesday, Knox stated, marked the 419th American combat vessel finished in 1943.

On last New Year's Day there were 419 war vessels in service—compared with 344 warships at the outbreak of the war. Twenty-one combatant ships have been lost in the past 11 months, the Secretary said, but during the next two weeks 21 other warships will be finished to offset this numerical loss.

The more than twoscore aircraft carriers completed this year, it was made plain, include many of the "baby flat-tops" which have demonstrated their worth both in anti-submarine work and landing operations. Technically classed as aux-

James Roosevelt Only 3 Feet From Colonel Killed on Makin

By Charles McMurtry

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 26 (AP).—The position of United States Marines of the Second Division who captured Tarawa was so critical on the first night that a determined Japanese counterattack "might have exterminated them, but the boys were so determined they never could have been driven off," Lieut. Col. Evans F. Carlson said today.

"It was really a blood-and-guts battle—just blood and guts," he said.

Lieut. Col. James Roosevelt, 36, of Marine raider fame, who accompanied the 165th Regiment (old Fighting 69th) ashore on Makin, said its commanding officer, Col. Gardiner Conroy of New York City, was killed because he forgot his own danger in concentrating on preparations to knock out a Jap strongpoint after the landing.

"I was only three feet from Colonel Conroy when he was killed," the President's son said. "I think a sniper got him, but it might have been machinegun fire. He was hit squarely between the eyes.

"A leader always is a marked man to the Japs and when Colonel Conroy began waving his arms, directing the tanks, he was a marked man."

"I was on the beach only 15 seconds after our last bomb dropped, said Colonel Roosevelt, Navy Cross winner for the August, 1942, raid on Makin.

"We followed the bombs in by only 100 yards. You can't expect to clean out every enemy position by aerial bombing and Navy gunfire, but you've no idea how it helps the morale of the assault troops to see those bombs dropping ahead."

Savage Shelling Of Atoll Described

whose object was Makin. Our combined forces then added up to more than 100 ships. And already far out beyond us was concentrated the greatest naval striking force in history.

Its purpose was to allow us to proceed with the landings with a minimum of interference from the Japanese navy or airforce.

We arrived off Tarawa several hours before dawn Saturday.

We expected the enemy to pick us up sooner than he did.

It was not until one of the flagship's observation planes started to warm up that enemy guns spoke. Five-inch shells screamed over the flagship anchored among the transports, which even then were busily loading Marines into landing vessels.

This was our signal to begin the attack.

Only Airfield in Gilbert

It is as flat as a pancake. It is an average of 6 feet above sea level and nowhere more than 12 feet. On it the Japanese built their only airfield in the Gilberts and fortified it well.

The American high command believed it to be good, too. For this reason battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers were sent to escort transports and cargo ships and to bombard the Atoll mercilessly.

Thus within a few minutes of the opening fire 16-inch guns of the flagship roared their reply.

Our success was almost immediate. An enormous fire started in the center of the island, bursting into explosions every few seconds. We had hit an ammunition dump.

A few seconds later we were successful again, knocking out one of the enemy shore batteries.

Stream of Shells

The other battleships, cruisers and destroyers moved into position for the planned bombardment. For the next four hours naval guns poured a stream of glowing shells onto the island.

By dawn the fires on the atoll were many, glowing redly into rolling masses of black smoke.

As day broke it became possible to see the island more distinctly. Already it was presenting a picture of utter desolation.

The bombardment was without precedent. As the bombardment increased in intensity Betio was obscured completely from view by dense clouds of smoke and dust. Our fire slackened only for a few minutes before the dive bombers were due. This was to allow the smoke and dust to clear away so the pilots could see the targets.

The first bombers carried two thousand pounders. One after another, in a seemingly endless chain, they peeled off and shot to earth, pulling out only a few hundred feet above the ground. After the bombers came strafing planes. Then the bombardment resumed.

Lieut. Comdr. R. A. MacPherson of Albuquerque, N. M., flying the flagship's observation plane, had the key job of discovering the 150 yards wide entrance to the lagoon and dropping markers to indicate the passage into it as well as on the coral heads which might be a menace to shipping.

So that the bombardment should be most effective, Admiral Hill sent two destroyers into the lagoon.

Hammered From Three Sides

Thus Betio was subjected to controlled fire from three sides—north, south and west.

The beaches where it was proposed to land received the most attention. An area a mile long by 250 yards deep received a bombardment equivalent to 20 pounds of explosive per square yard.

As the monotonous pounding continued hundreds of special armored landing vessels with assault troops of the first wave moved up on Betio. As they closed in, the naval firing ceased.

The sudden quiet came as a shock to those of us on the bridge of the battleships. After four hours of it we were weak and sore and tired as a result of the constant concussion.

The Japanese apparently were in much worse shape, for the special landing craft negotiated the reef with very light fire from the enemy.

Once they were ashore, however, the Marines found the Japanese had recovered quickly. They were solidly entrenched on Betio in coral and concrete dugouts, pillboxes and blockhouses. Behind 5 feet high parapets along the beaches, they opened fire with automatic weapons.

The Marines were unable to leave the beach and were forced to use the enemy parapets and rifle slits for protection and to fire on the enemy on the other side.

The second waves encountered even greater difficulty from heavy crossfire from shore. One 75-mm. gun which was still working destroyed several boats completely. Light and heavy machinegun fire played havoc with the marines when their boats grounded at the very edge of the reef and they were obliged to take to the water and flounder eight hundred yards to shore. These were terrible moments.

Notwithstanding the heavy opposition, the Marines waded to the beach to support the first wave of men. It was some hours before they were able to penetrate beyond the Japanese parapets, however.

Saturday's advances were so small and the Marine positions so insecure, that by nightfall it was obvious the situation was most critical and that we were not going to win, if we were going to win at all, without the heaviest casualties.

However, though the Marines barely had a toehold on the atoll, the Japanese were scarcely fit to counterattack in any strength Saturday night. They remained below ground, thus enabling the Marines to maintain their positions.

By noon Sunday the Marines staged a recovery and drove across the center of the island to control the eastern portion of the air strip. On the western end the Marines also drove across the island.

Japs Caught in Pocket

Thus a number of Japanese were caught in a pocket between these two groups, while the easterr end was still held by the enemy.

The Marines' difficulties lay in the fact that as usual they could see or get at very few of the Japanese.

To advance at all, the Marines had to dig out the enemy with hand grenades and TNT flung into these positions. This was a costly and laborious process.

The Marines had the fullest support of naval and air bombardment on request. From dawn to dusk planes bombed and strafed.

Destroyers closed in to automatic weapons' range, opening up against the enemy with 20 and 40 mm. fire. Large caliber shells also were put in.

By Monday morning, though still dangerous, the position had crystallized. It was clear that we would eventually get control.

Japs Bomb Own Men

Shortly before dawn on Sunday and Monday mornings, enemy bombers came over the island and obligingly bombed their own forces holding its eastern end. I saw the bomb flashes.

Another difficulty encountered Sunday was Japanese antiboat fire from the northern side of the island. Having control of sections of the south and north coasts, we were running in men and supplies through the lagoon.

A few Japanese during Saturday night managed to make their way out to the old rusting hulk aground on the reef, where they set up a light machinegun position and maintained heavy fire against the landing parties.

It wasn't until dive bombers and destroyers in the lagoon had bombarded the hulk for more than half an hour that the Japanese within were killed.

When I managed to land on Betio yesterday, the island had a ghostly and bizarre appearance. Nowhere did there seem to be an inch of the group that had not been struck by shell or bomb.

Last night the Japanese made one of their few attempts to counterattack. Leaving their holes at the eastern end, a large number of them tried a wild "banzai" bayonet charge along the south beach.

Attack Is Smashed

It lasted but a few minutes, the enemy being sent running madly back by devastating marine artillery fire, which killed a 150 of them.

Japanese troops, who yesterday and today tried to bolt from Betio by wading across the reef linking the atoll with the next atoll of Bairiki about 2 miles away, found themselves fired upon by marines who had landed on Bairiki and the automatic weapons of destroyers standing by for just that purpose.

Driven back into the hell of Betio, they fought like rats in a trap and fought as only desparate, well-trained men can fight.

Majj. Gen. Julianc Smith, commander of the Second Marine Division, announced early this morning the complete annihilation of the enemy could be expected by afternoon, as a result of their complete disorganiztaion.

He was right. Around noon word went over Betio that the island had been officially declared secured.

No sooner was it secured than American bulldozers and airfield-making equipment was rushed onto the strip by Seabees (Navy construction battalions).

sniping to hail a rescue boat.

The Japs continued to fire at General Smith's boat during a two-hour wait, but only the coxswain was wounded.

Brig. Gen. James Underhill, assistant commander of the Fourth Marine Division—an observer—and Brig. Gen. Thomas E. Bourke, Severne Park, Md., division artillery officer and commander of the Tenth Regiment, were among those forced to take cover in the water behind the stranded craft.

In the initial landings at 8:30 a. m., November 21, west longitude time, one of the three landing teams was so powerfully opposed that only two companies were able to land. They held a beachhead 70 yards wide for more than 24 hours.

I landed at the center beach under Maj. Henry Pierson Crowe, 44, and like the Marines I had to walk 500 yards shoreward through a machinegun crossfire.

Because of the low altitude of the island, all under 10 feet, it was impossible to secure any point agains enemy fire.

The Japanese defenses in this area, like those throughout the island, include heavy concrete emplacements, pillboxes with tankproof walls 3 feet thick and blockhouses made from cocoanut logs lashed together and filled in with coral sand. These make 4-foot barriers which can withstand much punishment.

The victory push began at 1 p. m. after the arrival of Colonel Edson and additional light and medium tanks.

Infantry and tanks advanced only 15 yards behind strafing planes while battleships and cruisers bombarded the Japanese-held area behind the lines.

Despite the intensity of our air and naval attacks, the Japanese fought back with undiminished ardor. This was testified by the constant arrival of stretcher bearers with wounded and dead Marines. But when the east end of the air strip finally was reached the Japanese doom was sealed and victory—slow and painful no doubt, but victory—became certain.

In these hellish 60 hours the heroism of the Marine officers and enlisted men alike was almost beyond belief. Time after time they unflinchingly charged Japanese positions, ignoring deadly fire and refusing to halt until wounded beyond the ability to carry on.

Men with gaping stomach and back wounds almost certainly fatal, begged doctors to fix them up so they could return to their outfits, and one captain who was shot through one arm and both legs sent a message to Crowe apologizing for "letting him down."

Officers Led the Way

Characteristically, officers throughout the division led the men into battle and as a consequence officer casualties in the battalions ran high. The commanding officer of one landing team was shot through the throat and killed instantly as he waded into the initial assault. His executive officer was missing, so an observer, Lieut. Col. W. I. Jordan, Virginia Beach, Va., took command.

Significantly, most surrenders, which probably total not more than 200, were coolie-class laborers. The soldiers prefer harakiri.

which Sattelberg stands, were well adapted to Japanese defense strategy. The Aussies were forced to overcome fixed defenses and dugouts.

United States "Black Cat" (Catalina) planes hit a Japanese cruiser 65 miles northwest of Rabaul the night of November 24 with two bombs, causing explosions. Fires were started below the decks.

The cruiser was heading west, accompanied by a destroyer. On the same night, a light enemy cruiser was bombed and probably destroyed off Garove in the Vitu Islands group north of New Britain.

(Meanwhile, Spencer Davis, AP war correspondent, reported from Admiral William F. Halsey's headquarters that every ship in an enemy flotilla was sunk or damaged last Thursday in a naval battle.

(There were six vessels in the squadron. First reports were that four destroyers were sunk, one damaged and the sixth escaped. Later reports, Davis said, indicated the fifth warship was so badly damaged that it sank later and that the sixth was hit, although it escaped. It appeared, also, that two of the sunken vessels were oversize destroyers or possibly cruisers of the Yubari class.)

South Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Saturday), Nov. 27 (AP).—Admiral William F. Halsey's destroyers steamed up to tiny Magine Island near the American beachhead of Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville early Tuesday and shelled Japanese gun installations there while tanks and additional troops were landed three miles distant near the Piva River mouth.

Nevertheless, Jap 75-mm. guns opened up as the landings started, damaging some ships in the operations and inflicting a few casualties.

U. S. Casualties 'Very Heavy' At Tarawa

By John G. Norris

American casualties during the three-day battle for Tarawa Island—main enemy base in the Gilberts—were "very heavy," Secretary of the Navy Knox reported yesterday, though probably considerably less than the some 4000 Japs killed there.

Our personnel casualties in the conquest of the rest of the Gilberts were light, Knox made plain. He said that our casualties in the taking of Makin Island were "very slight," while it has been reported that there was almost no opposition to the landing on Abemama—only other Gilbert Island reported occupied.

At the same time, the Navy chief declared that the fantastic enemy claims of American casualties in the Solomons during the recent fighting were designed to cover up their own very heavy losses, which he branded "nothing short of a military disaster."

"These claims," he added, "indicate a state of complete frustration on the part of Japan's military leaders."

Discussing the quick conquest of the Gilbert Islands, Knox disclosed that it was not accomplished without paying a considerable price in lives among our Marines.

"You can't capture an enemy stronghold such as Tarawa without losses," he declared. "It was hard, hard fighting. I want you to prepare the public for heavy losses."

The Secretary said he was unable as yet to give the total casualties incurred, but added that he "was satisfied they were less than those of the Japs—a good deal less." The enemy was estimated to have had about 6000 men in the Gilberts, about 4000 of them on Tarawa. The force was virtually annihilated.

In attacking Tarawa, he stated, our Marines and naval landing forces had to overcome natural advantages—dangerous coral reefs, heavy surf, and then a completely exposed beach under fire.

Knox compared the conquest of Tarawa with the Japanese capture of Wake Island two years ago. The two islands are about the same size and quite similar in many ways—though Tarawa had greater natural and prepared defenses. Two years ago, it took the enemy 15 days of hard fighting to take the island from 400 American Marines.

This week, United States Marines took Tarawa from 4000 Japs in only three days.

It cost the Japs seven warships to take Wake. Our losses at Tarawa, though not yet announced, are believed to be very much less.

Utrecht Cleared For Nazi Evacuees

London, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Netherlands city of Utrecht, which had a population of about 165,000 before the war is being emptied of its inhabitants to make room for Germans who have been bombed out of their homes, says the Vrij Nederland, Dutch newspaper published in London.

Preparations already have been made to house approximately 100,000 homeless Germans, the paper says, and various provinces have been told to make room for numbers ranging from 12,000 to 28,000.

Burma Raked By Bombers; Thailand Hit

Chungking, Nov. 26 (AP).—Chinese troops in a big enveloping movement have poised a trap around 100,000 Japanese invaders of Hunan Province's rice bowl, and recaptured two strategic towns—Tzeli and Shihmen—above Changteh, a Chinese spokesman declared today.

A Chungking communique declared 8400 Japanese had been killed in battles, mainly in the Tzeli and Changteh areas, in six days from November 19, against Chinese losses of 3000 men.

The spokesman described the present battle in Hunan Province as the most important in China since the start of the Pacific war, eclipsing in significance the third battle of Changsha in December, 1941, and January, 1942.

Changteh itself—northwest gateway to Changsha—was held for five days against fierce Japanese attacks, including bombardments of heavy shells, incendiaries and gas shells, and incessant bombing, he declared.

Bombers Hit Thailand

New Delhi, Nov. 26 (AP).—Allied bombers and fighters have crisscrossed Burma from top to bottom with aerial attacks in the last week, and even extended their raiding activities to Thailand, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Commander in Southeast Asia, announced today.

The Thailand thrust was made Saturday by American Liberators, which pounded several airfields. Twenty tons of bombs were dropped, destroying many aircraft on the ground and causing large fires and explosions.

A communique described numerous blows at Japanese installations and shipping all along the Burma coast and the important port of Rangoon, at the mouth of the Irrawaddy River, north to Myitkyina.

From Monday through Thursday U. S. fighter bombers from India carried on extensive operations in the Hurawng Valley, strafing enemy supply rafts and troop concentrations. An ammunition dump at Taihpanga was destroyed.

Ground activity during the period was confined to "vigorous patrols" in which minor clashes occurred in the Chin Hills and the upper reaches of the Chindwin River.

45 Balking Nazis Reported Killed by SS

Stockholm, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Free Danish News Service said today five German officers were executed and 40 soldiers were killed subsequently in an exchange of gunfire with sentries and SS guards at the Copenhagen artillery barracks when they refused to go to the Russian front recently.

iliaries—though potent fighting craft—the smaller carriers are not included among the 419 warships built in 1943.

Emphasis in the construction program, Knox stated, was placed this year on carriers—the big fleet carriers and the "baby flat-tops"—and the new destroyer escorts. The first of the DE antisub vessels was finished last February and some 230 have been completed since.

"The goal for the year was fixed at 260 (destroyer escorts)," Knox stated. "That quota is 90 per cent filled and will be surpassed before the end of the year. These vessels are now being turned out at a rate in excess of 40 per month."

Reporting on airplane production for the Navy, Knox recalled that on April 9, 1943, he had forecast that the number of naval combat planes would be more than trebled during 1943. This forecast, he said yesterday, will be fulfilled by December 31, 1943, with several hundred planes to spare.

Secretary Knox recalled that on last April 9 he had also predicted that the number of combatant ships would be doubled during 1943. This forecast, it was noted, is being met with several weeks to spare.

Because of the higher priority given to the carrier and antisubmarine vessels on available materials and labor, the construction of submarines has not been speeded as fast as desired, though results are "gratifying," it was said. New subs completed this year will be about 30 per cent of the number in existence last January 1, and the program is being speeded, Knox stated.

25 Pct. of Berlin Reported in Ruins

War Sidelights

Germans Threaten Old French City

By Thomas F. Hawkins

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Swiss newspaper Journal de Geneve said today that Nazi occupation authorities have threatened to raze the ancient French city of Grenoble if sabotage continues there.

The ultimatum was viewed here as an indication of Germany's course in retaliation against Chief of State Henri Philippe Petain's "sit-down strike" resulting from German refusal to allow him to promulgate a new democratic constitution for France.

Grenoble, a hotbed of patriot underground activities, is an Alpine valley fortress city on the Isere River about 60 miles southeast of Lyon.

New Airdrome Dedicated

London, Nov. 26 (AP).—The runways required by Britain-based American Army Air Forces are equivalent to a 20-foot concrete highway extending from New York to Berlin, Brig. Gen. C. R. Moore said today in dedicating a new American-built airdrome.

Royalists Organize

Naples, Nov. 26 (AP).—A new political party pledged to support a government headed by Crown Prince Umberto is being formed in Naples, further complicating the Italian political situation. The group is drawn largely from aristocratic families and military and naval officers.

Most of Damage Done by Incendiary Bombs, Say Experts

Stockholm, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen said today it had learned that German officials had admitted a fourth of Berlin was destroyed in the RAF's concentrated attacks Monday and Tuesday nights.

The newspaper quoted two Swedish eyewitnesses, one an engineer and the other a military explosives expert, as saying damage was largely located in the city's center.

The engineer, Sund Lundquist, and the explosives expert, Maj. Olof Nordzell, said:

"We would say destruction in the center of the city runs between 50 and 100 per cent."

No Bread, Milk For Sale

Censored reports and accounts from eyewitnesses gave this picture:

No bread or milk for sale Thursday; crowds waiting fruitlessly in front of shops for supplies; thousands of workers laboring night and day to clear the streets and get traffic in operation; many homeless people sleeping in the debris-littered streets; firemen so busy they have been unable to dig into ruined air raid shelters for bodies.

Lundquist added:

"I would say that in the center of the city about every tenth or fifteenth building was hit by a bomb and that other buildings around were damaged by incendiary bombs.

"One thing is certain. Most of the damage was caused by incendiary bombs, at least 90 per cent of all damage being by fire.

Wide Streets Saved Many

"The reason why only a few people were killed—compared with Hamburg, where nearly 50,000 were killed—is because Berlin streets are wider. People could rush from burning houses and find safety in the wide streets. Hamburg streets are narrow and the fire blanketed them."

The newspaper Social Demokraten said a preliminary check of Berlin casualties to yesterday numbered 4300 dead and 3800 badly injured. Another report put the number hospitalized at 8000.

Dispatches to the Svenska Dagbladet told of monocle-wearing German diplomats, looking grimy and dirty and carrying a loaf of bread under one arm, walking to damaged buildings which are still being used.

A press conference was held Wednesday at the Foreign Office as a damp, cold wind blew through shattered windows. Correspondents stood on a litter of broken glass. The government spokesman read his notes by the light of a dim lamp.

Wednesday's Mosquito raid caused only slight additional damage, it was reported, but the Sportspalast, where Hitler made many speeches, received a direct bomb hit.

Still Leaving Berlin

Bern, Nov. 26 (AP).—Thousands of bombed-out Berliners, their scanty possessions strapped to their backs, defied Nazi threats of punishment today to continue the mass exodus from the burning capital, German frontier dispatches said.

One traveler reaching Bern said that after Monday's assault the Gestapo arrested 3000 persons who were insane from shock, including 2000 women and children. He asserted that the hopelessly wounded and insane were killed.

A dispatch from Basel, on the Swiss-German frontier, to the newspaper La Suisse at Geneva said firemen in many instances were compelled to resort to dynamite in an attempt to check the spreading flames.

Germans but "the Soviet soldie who fights stubbornly and fiercely."

The capture of Gomel by Marshal Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's troops completed Soviet strategy by splitting the German northern and Ukraine fronts at the Pripet marshes and liberated a city which had been under the Nazis since mid-August, 1941.

Bastion Outflanked

The Russians, who had almost surrounded Gomel for several weeks, flanked the heavily-fortified bastion and finally made it untenable with a great new offensive that opened this week north of Gomel.

At Gomel five rail lines intersect, all but one of which have been cut. Two lead into Poland, one in the direction of Brest-Litovsk, and the other through Minsk to Vilna and Lithuania. This latter line is the one remaining open. Other lines connect Gomel with Moscow, Odessa and Leningrad.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin radio commentator, said "since the evacuation of Gomel, Soviet forces form one solid offensive front from Rechitso to a point west of Krichev."

Germany Appears Defenseless in Air, U. S. Officer Says

A U. S. Bomber Station In England, Nov. 26 (AP).—A Flying Fortress pilot who completed his tour of operations as a deputy commander of one of the groups in the heavy bombing mission today said that for the first time Germany was beginning to look defenseless against U. S. daylight bombing attacks.

"In the past six months things have changed plenty," said Capt. Robert O. Fricks, 25, of Atlanta, Georgia.

"When we first started going over, a mission to Paris was tougher than today's raid, which was supposed to be on one of Germany's most heavily defended cities (Bremen). Enemy fighters were scarce, and the flak was not bad."

8 Enemy Planes Felled as Convoy Is Attacked by 30

Algiers, Nov. 26 (AP).—Thirty enemy planes attacked an Allied convoy in the Mediterranean this evening and eight of the planes were shot down, it was announced.

Seven of the planes were shot down by coastal command planes and the other by the ships' antiaircraft batteries. Damage to the convoy was negligible.

Fighting French Spitfire pilots and RAF and United States Army Air Force Beaufighters participated in the battle.

Polish Sub Active

London, Nov. 26 (AP).—Polish naval headquarters announced today that the Polish submarine Sokol operating in the Aegean Sea had sunk an anti-submarine vessel, three small supply ships and an E-boat.

west Indians, had been fighting with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces since the landing at Salerno.

The "Fighting Forty-fifth" was part of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s Seventh Army in the invasion and conquest of Sicily.

The Germans have a particular dread of the Forty-fifth's fighting qualities because some of them believe the Indians are cannibalistic.

While generally unfavorable weather kept Allied heavy bombers on the ground, a statement from Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaat's air command disclosed that the three main railways on which the Germans depend for the bulk of their supplies at the Italian battle front have been closed to traffic for more than a month by sustained bombing.

The statement declared the Nazis have been forced to rely on small subsidiary rail lines and motor transport for every box of ammunition and sack of meal they have sent to their "winter line."

The three rail lines are the central Apennine route from Bologna through Florence to Rome, the west coast line through Genoa and Leghorn to Rome, and the east coast track from Bologna through Rimini and Ancona to Pescara.

In September and October 360 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and 309 shot out of the sky, the review said, with Fortresses alone shooting down 140.

In long-range operations yesterday, American Mitchells bombed the Italian port of Ancona on the Adriatic while RAF Spitfires crossed that sea to shoot up Nazi vehicles near Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia. One Allied craft was lost during the day.

De Gaulle Accused By Communists

Algiers, Nov. 26 (AP).—French Communists took a step toward an open break with the De Gaullists today by publicly accusing Gen. Charles de Gaulle of bad faith in promising the party places on the National Committee of Liberation.

Andre Marty, Communist leader, told a press conference that De Gaulle had been insisting on naming two Communists of his own selection—Fernand Grenier and Andre Mercier—to the committee instead of allowing the party to propose its own choices.

general had a great field of usefulness "where loyalty, drive and gallantry on the part of the Army commander" is essential.

Accompanying the report, Secretary Stimson sent a letter to the committee making it plain that General Eisenhower is responsible for all matters of discipline within his theater, and voicing full confidence "that his sense of justice and fairness has resulted in his acting in this matter, as in all others, in the highest interest of his soldiers and his country."

Was His Decision

"The decision to weigh Lieut. Gen. Patton's great services to his country, in World War I and in World War II, from these shores to Casablanca and through Tunisia and to triumph in Sicily, on the one hand, against an indefensible act on the other, was General Eisenhower's," said Stimson.

"As his report shows, General Eisenhower in making his decision also considered the value to our country of General Patton's aggressive, winning leadership in the bitter battles which are to come before final victory."

Senate Military committeemen, even those most strongly commending the course followed by Eisenhower, were noncommittal as to the committee's probable action on Patton's permanent advancement to major general.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado said there would have to be "further study."

Thomas Lauds Report

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah said the committee had reached no conclusions, but that Eisenhower's report lived up "to the best in military tradition" and was a masterly summation of the case.

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon said that "what General Eisenhower does for the moment, I've got to support for the moment. . . . Expediency in winning the war requires many of us to do things we wouldn't otherwise do."

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire said General Patton "plainly was suffering from battle strain, but that doesn't necessarily excuse what he did."

Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York said Congress should leave the whole matter to Secretary Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff: "They are able, capable, reasonable men, and I'll take their judgment on what is just and proper."

Interviews With Servicemen Show Patton Is Backed, 2-1

By Walter Wood

Ten out of 15 servicemen interviewed yesterday in Washington stood strong on the side of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton and agreed that "Old Blood and Guts" is too good a general to lose.

Five ere just as firm in their belief that he should be as severely reprimanded as any "buck private" or "noncom" who breaks rules of military discipline.

The fighting men, some of them veterans of the war in the African theater and two of them sailors who have seen a lot of Patton, spoke in plain words and their opinions were clear. None made a hasty remark or fired a hot-tempered invective. They asked that their names not be used, for obvious reasons.

A rugged sergeant in the six-foot 200-pound class backed up Patton all the way and called him a good soldier.

"If any action's going to be taken," said the sergeant, "they should wait until after the war, like they are doing in the cases of those officers held responsible at Pearl Harbor."

Radioman Backs Patton

A Navy chief radioman, who was on the ship that took two-gun-packing Patton from the North African war to the invasion of Sicily, said "I think he's a pretty good man."

"He carries two pearl-handled pistols at his sides," said the Navy chief, "and he's been in there in the thick of it, dodging bullets along with the rest of 'em. I lost my temper the other day and can appreciate his position."

Apparently referring to the Senate investigation of the Patton incident, the Navy man said "no civilian should take any action, it should be left in Army hands."

An Army sergeant who was in the minority said "he (Patton) was definitely in the wrong and should be court-martialed."

Seen Up to Eisenhower

Said a buck private who was playing cards in the Pepsi Cola Servicemen's Center:

"All I know is what I read in the papers. I think it should be left up to General Eisenhower." (Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is commander-in-chief of Allied forces in the North African theater).

The Office of War Information, it was learned meanwhile, did not broadcast the Patton story over its short-wave radio, which is beamed to Axis and occupied countries, but did send it in news reports cabled to papers in Allied and neutral nations.

The Special Services Divisions of the War Department, which broadcasts news to American troops on the fighting fronts, handled it as a routine news story.

Congress Gets 7-Billion-Dollar Program to Help Veterans

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Congress got a seven billion dollar program yesterday for financial aid to demobilized service men and women. Introduced after President Roosevelt urged such action, it calls for:

Up to $300 mustering-out pay on leaving the service.

$15 to $25 a week unemployment compensation, depending on the number of dependents, if without a civilian job at any time during the first 15 months after leaving the service.

Social Security credits, based on pay of $160 a month, for time spent in the service.

The program was introduced in four separate bills. Identical measures covering unemployment compensation and Social Security credits were introduced in the Senate by Senators Wagner (Democrat) of New York, George (Democrat) of Georgia and Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, acting jointly, and in the House by Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina of the Ways and Means Committee.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky and Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky of the House Military Committee introduced bills providing for mustering out pay. May said the plan had the backing of the White House.

President Roosevelt urged in a message earlier this week that Congress provide now for financial aid to those leaving the armed services. He said such action would give a big boost to morale of fighting men.

Under the May-Barkley plan, mustering-out pay would go to all personnel below the grades of major in the Army and lieutenant commander in the Navy. It would be $100 for less than four months' service, $200 for four to six months' service, and $300 for six months or more service.

The program of unemployment compensation calls for $15 a week for single persons with an additional $5 a week for a dependent wife and $2.50 for each child up to a total of $25 a week. It would be handled through the Social Security Board, cooperating with State unemployment agencies, and would be denied to those refusing "suitable employment."

Cost Estimate Is "Rough"

The Social Security provisions would have the effect of bringing under old age and survivors' insurance thousands of servicemen and women who were not covered in civilian life. For those who were covered while civilians, the effect would be to increase the prospective amount of the coverage.

The estimated seven-billion-dollar cost of the over-all program is a rough one. Senator Wagner said it was impossible to forecast with accuracy the cost of unemployment compensation and Social Security provisions since there was no way of knowing how many would need unemployment payments. But he said the cost should not be more than the cost of "running the war for about two weeks during the present fiscal year." This would be about four billion dollars.

May made no estimate of what sum would be required for mustering out pay. With 10 million eligibles getting $300 it would be three billion dollars.

All measures would apply both to those now in the services and those already discharged.

Berlin Blasted Again; Yanks Hit Bremen

tacked an airfield and military objectives in the Pas de Calais area, a possible invasion corner, and Bostons, Mitchells and Typhoons bombed targets near Cherbourg.

This latest burst of raids made November shape up as one of the heaviest attack months of the war.

Brig. Gen. Robert F. Travis of Savannah, Ga., who led a Fortress group, said that "the flak was about the roughest I ever experienced" and added that while there were plenty of German fighters around, "they were not as determined as I have seen them before."

In addition to the 29 U. S. heavy bombers and 5 fighters missing, 1 light and 4 medium bombers were lost from the attacking force, bringing the total Allied loss to 39.

London had its second night alert in succession last night, but the German raid was on a small scale, in spite of the recent German threats of reprisals. Bombs fell in a residential section, however, and caused a number of casualties.

A sizable force of RAF bombers gave the western German manufacturing city of Frankfurt its thirty-ninth blasting of the war Thursday night, and swift Mosquito bombers hit Berlin in the fourth straight night attack on that capital shattered by two trip-hammer raids. Thirteen British bombers were lost in all.

The two heavy operations by day and by night were the seventeenth and eighteenth big Allied raids from Britain in November—normally one of the year's worst months for air activity. The big American planes went into action after a week's lay-off.

November's score of nine each for the RAF and the Americans still is four short of the Allies' best month of the war—August, when 22 attacks were undertaken.

The Mosquito dash over Berlin made the twentieth night out of 25 in November that bombs had plumped upon that capital.

Yes—That Was a Raid Shelter They Built at the White House

The fact that the White House has a bomb shelter has at last been disclosed.

Now that the story is out, it can also be revealed that Mr. Roosevelt was not particularly keen about the idea; apparently he felt that there was little chance of a German air raid.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who has dominion over the Secret Service, insisted on a bomb shelter at the White House, and the President finally agreed. At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt suggested a new office building; this suggestion materialized in what is now the new East Wing of the White House.

With his highly developed sense of the historic, the President further suggested that the East Wing might some day be converted into a museum. The building would be divided into rooms, one for each President, and in these would be placed relics and mementoes of the men who have served as Chief Magistrate.

Officials who ought to know see little chance of the East Wing ever becoming a museum. The prospect is, they say, that the work of the White House will continue to mount, not shrink; and they therefore believe that the East Wing office space will always be needed.

As for enemy air raids and bomb shelters, it is realized that the Nazis' best chance to strike at the Allied leaders was at the Quebec War Conference. President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were both in the Citadel there; their highest-ranking military advisers were in the Chateau Frontenac. If the Nazis ever toyed with the idea of a blow against Allied leaders, this was their finest opportunity.

U. S. Bill in Latin America 600 Million, Rockefeller Says

Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, insisted last night that all expenditures and commitments during the past three years in the United States' program of cooperation with Latin-American countries, including military and naval installations, had totaled less than $600,000,000.

Speaking at an American Legion dinner honoring other American republics at the Mayflower Hotel, Rockefeller declared: "There has been considerable talk and speculation about the cost to the United States of this program of cooperation. Uniformed estimates have ranged all the way to 6 billion dollars—a figure I read in a magazine article just the other day. That figure was said to represent a three-year outlay, not including the sum spent for goods, food and raw materials. That guess is a misrepresentation of the facts."

Continuing his report on cooperation with Latin America, Rockefeller said that after three years of war, United States Government loans to the other Americas, including lend-lease materials and Export-Import Bank loans, total $603,000,000, of which less than half has actually been disbursed.

"It is interesting to note in this connection that up to date the other American republics have paid back to the Export-Import Bank loans totaling $107,000,000," Rockefeller declared.

Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky reminded that the road between North America and Latin America is not a one-way highway and insisted it would be "a short-sighted policy" to limit friendship and cooperation to the duration of the war.

"While commerce is necessary to give employment to those who produce, I do not believe we should place the commercial relationship above the moral and spiritual relationship that cements the world," Senator Barkley declared.

Don Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican ambassador, said the unity of this hemisphere and its energetic attitude in face of the common danger had "prevented the devastation of our fields, the ruin of our cities and other abominable crimes." Warren H. Atherton, national commander of the American Legion, was toastmaster at the dinner.

Walsh Named To U. S. Senate

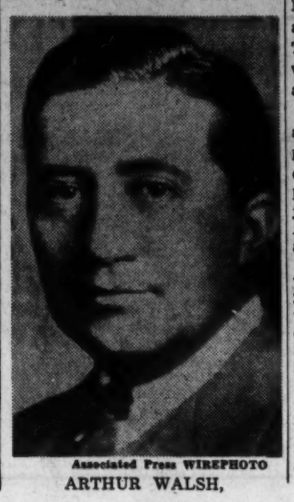

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 26 (AP).—Gov. Charles Edison today appointed Arthur Walsh of South Orange, executive vice president of the far-flung Thomas A. Edison, Inc., industries, as United States Senator to succeed the late W. Warren Barbour.

Like the Governor, who is on leave as president of the company, the 47-year-old Walsh is a Democrat. Barbour, who died Monday night in Washington, was a Republican.

Walsh will serve until a successor for Barbour's unexpired term is chosen in next November's election. The term will expire in January, 1947.

Walsh, an Edison family friend for many years, managed the Governor's election campaign in 1939. He is a member of the Port of New York Authority and a former State director and assistant national administrator of the Federal Housing Administration.

ARTHUR WALSH,

Slaying of Ohio Farm Family Called 2-Man Crime

Washington Court House, Ohio, Nov. 26 (AP).—A possibility that two assassins figured in the bizarre Thanksgiving eve slaying of the wealthy Elmer McCoy family was advanced tonight.

As Prosecutor John B. Hill studied this angle in an attempt to pierce the mystery about the crime, Sheriff W. C. Icenhower left suddenly on an unannounced journey outside Fayette County. Associates said he intended to "see a suspect."

McCoy, 59, a swine breeder; his wife, Forrest, 64, and their 22-year-old school-teacher daughter Mildred, were found shot to death at their farm yesterday. McCoy's body was just inside a barn door, his wife's on a screened porch 200 yards away, and Mildred's beside her automobile, 50 feet from the house.

Hill turned to the twin-assassin theory after explaining the positions of the bodies. He said:

"It is possible that one man killed the father in the barn and then the girl by the automobile. Both were shot once by a .36 caliber revolver.

"The mother might have heard the shot that killed her daughter just 60 feet away and came out on the screened-in porch to investigate, still holding a dishcloth and dish in her hands, and a second man who was crouched down on the porch fired at her and missed, and then hit her with the next shot and she fell. Then he fired into her body at least six more bullets, some of them .32's with steel jackets from an automatic, and the others .38 lead slugs. Then they cut the telephone lines and got away."

"No dummy—or dummies—did this," the prosecutor added. "The plan was too well thought out and executed. The killer must have been well known to the McCoys to have got close enough to the father and daughter to shoot them so that powder burns were caused. The McCoys must have trusted the killer, or killers, up to the last minute."

He said he still felt "revenge" was the likely motive, but that a check of "all jealousies and romances left us nothing and we're at sea."

Labor Rights

The practice of putting "jokers" in congressional bills is altogether reprehensible, even when the joker is intended to serve a useful purpose. Such a "joker" has been discovered in the current tax bill in the provision requiring labor organizations to make an annual financial accounting to the Internal Revenue Bureau. The reform is something for which this newspaper has long pleaded, yet we feel that the proper place for it is in a comprehensive measure governing the regulation of labor unions. Of course, the provision has met with strong opposition from labor spokesmen. Someday they will realize the mistakenness of their attitude. To hasten their education we commend to them the 80-page report on "Democracy in Trade-Unions" prepared by a special committee for the American Civil Liberties Union. The report reflects the findings and conclusions of a special committee headed by Prof. Eduard C. Lindeman of Columbia University and carries the indorsement of a long list of distinguished liberals. By no stretch of the imagination can it be thought of as antilabor in either origin or tone. Yet it contains a great deal of straightforward advice which many labor leaders are loth to hear.

The study was made because of the numerous complaints reaching the Civil Liberities Union of undemocratic practices within the labor movement. Some of these practices are the exclusion of women, Negroes and others from union membership, excessive initiation and membership fees, control of unions by autocratic cliques, failure of a few unions to hold regular and fair elections, failure to account to their membership for union funds, and in some cases use of union machinery for racketeering. The committee found that these practices "are exceptions to the generally democratic methods of most unions." But it added that few unions are entirely free from undemocratic practices of one sort or another.

"It is evident that unless the abuses in trade-unions which have aroused widespread hostility are corrected," the committee writes, "the drive for legislative control may not only undo the great gains for labor's rights in recent years but also impose unwarranted restrictions." Indeed, the committee suggests two restrictions. It would forbid discriminations on grounds of race, religion, politics, and so forth in admittance of individuals to union membership and it would provide an appeal for workers who complain of unfair expulsion from unions. Other reforms suggested would be left to the discretion of the unions themselves.

Union leaders contend that even the filing of financial statements is unjustifiable. The Civil Liberties Union does not agree.

"It will be maintained by many trade-unionists," the report says, "that their affairs are of no concern to 'outsiders'. That argument has been destroyed long since by the unions' acceptance of public protection in organizing and bargaining collectively and in the public regulation of industrial conflict." Unregulated labor monopolies are no more tolerable than unregulated industrial monopolies. In pointing to the need for a trade-union "bill of rights" we think the Civil Liberties Union has given labor and Congress constructive, thoughtful and friendly advice, although we doubt that it goes far enough. Real statesmanship in the ranks of labor is needed to sponsor these reforms before they are imposed by public demand and shaped by interests unfavorable to workers' rights. But, with or without the backing of union leadership, Congress one of these days will be compelled to act by the pressure of an outraged public opinion. The issue cannot be met either partially or subterraneously by joker legislation.

15-30 Concerts

The National Symphony Orchestra begins its second series of concerts for young people between 15 and 30 tonight at Constitution Hall. James Melton, a young American tenor from the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the guest artist. These concerts, doubtless, possess a more direct appeal than the average, since the programs are designed and planned especially to suit the taste of an audience composed of young people. Following the pattern of last winter, four more concerts have been scheduled for the winter's series, and the price of the tickets has been trimmed to fit the pockets of younger music enthusiasts. It has been well said that in this overcrowded city of weary office workers good music offers a spiritually therapeutic escape from the tyranny of the typewriter and the filing cabinet. Furthermore, due to the fact that the work of the concert committees is done entirely by the young people themselves, the seeds of an active and intelligent musical public are being fertilized by the sponsors of this comparatively new venture. Fine music can only flourish in an atmosphere of enlightened patronage, and so the 15-30 concerts contribute not only to our immediate cultural experience but to our aesthetic life of the future.

Boondoggle In Oil

When the full record of the Canol project is reviewed, it appears that Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson lent himself to an equivocal whitewash of his department. This newspaper, unfortunately, assisted to some extent in the whitewashing. On the basis of Mr. Patterson's testimony before the Truman Committee, we concluded editorially on Wednesday that "The Canol project, from a purely military point of view, appears to have been thoroughly justified." We reached this conclusion because Mr. Patterson had said to the Truman Committee: "This job of high strategic importance for carrying on the war has been approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. That should settle any doubts." It did, in fact, settle our doubts.

But the bald truth of the matter appears to be as Mr. Patterson himself later acknowledged, that it was not approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff until October 26, 1943. It was not even considered by that group until last month—after, be it noted, the Truman Committee had begun its investigation of the project. At its inception, in April, 1942, the undertaking had the approval only of Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell. And his approval was given on the basis of an exceedingly meager study of the problem, in the face of adverse criticism by most of the few oil engineers consulted, and without prior reference to the Army engineers who would have to carry out the work. That the joint chiefs now order its completion is no indication that they would have countenanced it in the first place, had all the facts been at their disposal.

How hastily and carelessly this enterprise was conceived can be measured from the great discrepancy which has developed between expectations and results. The cost was estimated at about 25 million dollars; it has already cost 100 millions and will cost 30 millions more before completion. The impression was given to General Streett of the General Staff that the job could be done in a short time; it has been under way since April, 1942, and will not be finished before the spring of next year. Had this time element been clearly understood, it is doubtful that the project would have been considered of military advantage. There was simply no adequate appraisal of the cost and difficulties involved in building some 600 miles of pipeline over two mountain ranges and a dozen rivers. And these costs and difficulties now appear to be out of all proportion to the meager results achieved. The 479 barrels of aviation gasoline to be produced daily at White Horse can scarcely be considered sufficient for the defense of Alaska.

The curious and disturbing aspect of this affair is not so much that the War Department became wedded to the Canol project in haste as that it stubbornly refuses to repent at leisure. General Somervell and the General Staff and even the Joint Chiefs of Staff are fallible. And the Truman Committee is entirely within its proper province in calling into question their disposition of public funds. This is not a matter to be ignored simply because it is said to be dictated by military strategy. The War Department is unduly prone to justify any and every decision by this comfortable formula. Judge Patterson could better have promoted public confidence in his agency by a little more candor, a little less self-righteousness.

United Nations Bank

The tentative plan for establishment of a United Nations Bank which has been drafted by Treasury experts is intimately linked with the Treasury's earlier proposal to establish an international stabilization fund. This is the so-called "White Plan." Critics of this stabilization plan and also of the rival British or Keynes Plan have expressed fear that stabilization funds might be drawn upon to meet the relief needs of impoverished countries or to supply them with long-term investment capital. So, in offering suggestions for the creation of a United Nations Bank to provide capital for sound investments, the Treasury emphasizes the restricted function of its proposed international stabilization fund. Such a fund, it points out, is primarily designed to promote the stability of foreign exchange rates and thus enhance the attractiveness of foreign investment.

Monetary experts disagree about the merits of the rival stabilization programs. They also question whether stabilization of currencies should precede, follow, or succeed a revival of international investment activities. But all would agree that without stable exchanges efforts to revive international lending will encounter tough going. The Treasury assumes, moreover, that for many years to come the flow of capital to countries in need of investment funds will probably be inadequate. That, too, is a thesis that will be disputed by some financial authorities. But in view of the heavy losses suffered by people who have invested their savings in foreign countries, the assumption seems reasonable. Hence the primary aim of the proposed international bank (which would have an authorized capital equivalent to about 10 billion dollars) would be to encourage revival of overseas investing (1) by providing some capital outright for reconstruction purposes where private capital is unwilling to take the risk and (2) by guaranteeing or participating in loans made by private agencies. The Treasury experts take great pains to allay fears that the proposed bank would interfere with private investment operations. On the contrary, they stress the importance of cooperation with private financial lending agencies and state that the bank "should be a powerful factor in encouraging the provision of private capital for internation investment."

Of course, even the most competently managed international investment bank could not function successfully in a world given over to economic disorder or in countries wracked by political strife. The mere cessation of a World War will not, in short, assure a return of conditions favorable to foreign lending. But the existence of an international organization equipped to engage in investment operations at the first feasible moment might of itself help to restore order in world economic affairs. Secretary Morgenthau, at any rate, concludes that such a bank, operated as a companion agency of an international stabilization fund, "could help provide a sound financial foundation on which private enterprise can build a prosperous world economy."

Book Boom

The strangest of all the war booms is the great bull market in books, manifest not only in the United States but also in Britain, despite the paper scarceties. In this country, so great is the appetite for printed words, it is estimated that by the end of the year 350 million books—or nearly two books for each inhabitant, including the four million-odd illiterates—will have been sold since January 1. Even if text and technical books are excluded from consideration, the ratio would be pretty close to one book for every American, so that the old joke about somebody not being able to give somebody else a book for Christmas because he has a book already will soon become universally applicable.

The main factor in the book boom, according to The Wall Street Journal, is the introduction of mass production and distribution methods into the publishing business, as evidenced in the vast new markets that have been opened to cheap editions and reprints. Mr. Willkie's book, which surpassed all sales records, is an instance in point. Moreover, the expansion of the cheap edition trade, which lends to make chronic readers out of persons who had been only occasional book readers, has reflexively stimulated the sales of the more expensive books and also helped to recruit new members for book clubs and circulating libraries.

But it cannot be said that the great quantitative boom in books has been accompanied by any great qualitative increase. Indeed, a qualitative decline is indicated in the number of original titles published in the past few years, and this year the greater portion of new books have been of a variety known to the trade as "quickies." The qualitative decline in literary production is also manifest in the increasing dependence of the publishers on anthologies and new editions of classics. A recent phenomenon in this field is the appearance of various masterpieces like The Brothers Karamazov and The Pickwick Papers in cheap editions de luxe, as in the new Illustrated Modern Library.

Wartimes, of course, have seldom been conducive to the production of great literature, though it is easy enough to find exceptions, such as the comedies of Aristophanes and the novels of Jane Austin. Perhaps one test of a great writer might be whether he can preserve his Olympian detachment amid all the distractions of war. There is a story that the philosopher Hegel was interrupted at work one day by a commotion in the street outside. After going to the window and perceiving that it was just the Battle of Jena, he returned to his writing table and calmly went on with the correction of his proofs oblivious to the thunder of the guns. But there are wars and wars, and if there was any German philosopher at work last week in Berlin, we doubt if he was capable of the same imperturbability.

Progress In Italy

Allied progress in Italy has been so slow during recent weeks that even a modest triumph has all the appearances of a resounding victory. Yet the action of the British Eighth Army in battering its way across the swollen Sangro River and thus cracking the so-called "winter line" of the Nazis is of real importance. It suggests the possibility that the impasse on the Italian front has at last been surmounted. Doubtless in at least one sector of that front movement from now on will be rapid. It looks as if a move in the direction of Pescara and the rail line that runs west across the peninsula to Rome is now in order.

HIGH PASTURE

I have seen much in the high woods
Of pasture snow and frost,
The webs that line the fence at dawn,
And wild thyme like pink frost.

And sometimes from the swinging branch,
I see the insect drawn
And killed because a spider dropped
A thread across the dawn.

But out of death springs newer life,
For once along our way
We saw the little calf walk down
And blink in his found day.

And pink of thyme and singing bird
Combined with singing earth
To make the open skies declare
The miracle of birth.

Good Neighbors

Cultural Relations

THE SECOND World War has shocked this Nation into realizing that many of our relations with the outside world should be handled differently in the future. One of the great dangers ahead is that we may forget this when peace comes. Especially dangerous is the possibility that certain programs in foreign relations that we are glad to pay for now while we are scared will be overlooked when we feel safe again.

Chief among these is our program of cultural relations with foreign countries. Today we have a vigorous program going in Latin America and are doing what we can in China and the Near East. Rather than reducing this when peace comes, our national interest demands that it should be expanded and put on a world-wide basis.

The United States was the last of the great powers to wake up to the value of making friends for ourselves in foreign countries. We have been too quick to dismiss cultural things as impractical. As a hard-headed business nation, we don't like to spend our money for something unless we are sure it will pay off.

Cultural Relations

I don't think anybody would call our allies, the British, sentimentalists in their world-wide operations. Yet here is what they found out about cultural relations in 1934. I quote a report by the British Council, their equivalent of our State Department's Division of Cultural Relations:

"For some time before the establishment of the council (November, 1934), reports had been reaching London from diplomatic and trade missions abroad that much harm was being done to British interests by the active cultural propaganda of certain foreign powers and by the absence of any counteraction on our part. The budget of the Italian government showed them to be spending the equivalent of a million pounds (over four million dollars) on cultural propaganda. The German government must be assumed to have been spending, on the most moderate estimate, two or three times that amount. The French indeed had first seen the advantages of cultural propaganda and their work in this field had been conducted skillfully and on a large scale."

This was years before we dreamed of starting a program. Through the 1930's, the millions spent by Germany mounted. Russia and Japan pushed active campaigns the world over.

In 1938, the Division of Cultural Relations of our Department of State was created and began to operate on a shoestring. The first appropriation it was allowed was less than a hundred thousand dollars—for the year ended June 30, 1940.

By that time Germany, Japan and Italy were pouring out millions to create distrust and hatred of us among our next-door neighbors, the Latin Americans.

In 1940, the Rockefeller office was created to carry out an emergency cultural and commercial program there. The permanent cultural relations program received less than $100,000 for the fiscal year 1941, around $150,000 for 1942, less than a million for 1943 and around a million and a half for 1944.

The British Council was spending nearly 2½ millions by 1941 and the figure has since gone up.

Japan's Frantic Efforts

Germany is today still pushing her program as best she can. Japan is making frantic efforts to do so. That country has never been anything less than a hard-bitten realist in foreign policy.

Since 1938, as money has been forthcoming, the United States has set under way a rather broad program in Latin America. Its aim has been to give them a true picture of our country and to find out ourselves what they are like. The results of this belated program, which is still largely of an emergency character, have been excellent. No one who follows the Latin-American press and thought among the people who form opinion there can doubt that this is one of the strongest factors in the growing teamwork of the New World republics.

One of the most immediate needs in this country's cultural relations with people from other lands is for a place here in Washington, where cultural activities can be centered. At present the Pan American Union and the Library of Congress are used for some of these activities. The State Department and the CIAA use local hotels and even the homes of officials for social functions. The need for a headquarters for social-cultural events is acute. It will grow even more so if the program is expanded in the postwar as our interests demand.

War is giving this country a chance to catch up on its cultural relations program. If we are to assume our responsibilities as a world power in the peace—and there doesn't seem much chance of avoiding it—then Washington will be a world capital in its fullest sense. The city should have the facilities to play this role effectively. The time to get down to preparing for it is now.

The Tide Flows On

By Barnet Nover

Germany's Declining Strength

LAST TUESDAY, when Berlin's badly shaken population was contemplating the grim results of the fiercest and most destructive raid their city had ever experienced, the Berlin newspapers came out with headlines boasting of the recapture of Samos, in the Dodecanese.

That was the best that Dr. Goebbels could do in the way of solacing the stricken inhabitants of Germany's capital and her largest city, that plus renewed threats of vengeance against the British.

But it is doubtful whether such propagandist devices will bolster the morale of even the most deluded Nazis.

IT IS NOW EVIDENT that recent manifestations of German offensive strength in the Aegean, in Italy and on the Eastern Front were no more than flashes in the pan.

The recapture of Zhitomir by the Wehrmacht has now been followed by the halting of the German offensive in the direction of Kiev and by the loss of Gomel, anchor of the German defense line in White Russia.

The German successes in the Dodecanese did temporarily strengthen the German position in the Balkans, where Hitler's uneasy satellites have for some time been looking for a way out. The recapture of Kos, Leros and Samos by the Germans appeared to bar the way to an Allied invasion of the Balkans from the south.

But the two Allied raids on Sofia have made it plain, not only to the Bulgars, but also to the Magyars and Rumanians, that the Allied air route to the Balkans is wide open.

Most important of all, the recent raids on Berlin have demonstrated both the growing air strength of the Allies and Germany's weakened defenses. Allied plane losses in those raids, while not negligible, have been relatively slight.

THIS FACT is of tremendous importance.

The Nazis have been well aware for some time that no city is bomb proof. But they have done all in their power to make Berlin as difficult and as costly to bomb as possible. Nor was this due alone to the circumstances that Berlin is a vital industrial area, the hub of an elaborate system of rail, road and water communications and the administrative heart of Nazidom.

The all-important fact regarding Berlin, so far as the Nazis are concerned, is that it is Germany's solar plexus. A heavy blow dealt Berlin would be felt acutely throughout the length and breadth of the Reich, throughout the length and breadth of Europe.

What happened at Cologne, in the Ruhr, even in Hamburg could be hidden from the direct gaze of the foreign representatives in the Reich. What happened in Berlin could not. That is why, despite the drastic Nazi censorship, authentic news of the effects of the recent Allied raids on Berlin immediately became available to the outside world.

ACCORDING to some reports, a mass exodus from Berlin is now under way. Indeed, according to one account, the city may now very largely be evacuated.

These reports are to be taken with a grain of salt. It is quite true places will have to be found for the many thousands of Berliners who were left homeless by the raids and temporary haven for them may have to be found in other cities.

But the Nazis cannot abandon Berlin, no more than they could abandon Cologne or Hamburg or the cities of the Ruhr after they had been laid waste by Allied air raids.

Despite the proved vulnerability of those west German cities to Allied bombing, despite the heavy drain on Germany's manpower and material resources which their rebuilding involves, such rebuilding has taken place.

IT HAS NOT BEEN, it could not be, a 100 per cent job. That is beyond Germany's present capacity and, moreover, there has not been time enough to do such a job. But insofar as it has been possible to restore essential services in Hamburg, Cologne, Essen and other blitzed cities of West Germany, to reopen the factories, plants and mills and provide elementary shelter for the workers, this has been done.

The point is that Germany today is in dire need of all her productive facilities. She has no margin to spare. Indeed, even if all of her factories were running full blast, she would be facing a growing margin of Allied superiority. Allied bombing has tended greatly to increase that margin and the effect is being felt on all the battle fronts. It is also being felt in the realm of morale.

However, we must not forget that the Battle of Berlin is only in its beginning stages. Much more remains to be done before Berlin becomes another Hamburg and weather conditions and other handicaps may intervene to prevent that goal from being achieved rapidly. But the moving finger writes. And the people of the Reich are filling out the uncompleted sentence:

"Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin."

Oversimplifying Subsidies

I have read Mr. Walter Lippmann's column, "The A, B, C of Subsidies," in this morning's Post with considerable interest. I was quite surprised to note that Mr. Lippmann showed a very distinct departure from his usual grasp of problems which he discusses. In his attempt to make the subsidy understood by the laymen, he very much oversimplified the question. This was particularly true with reference to his summary statement which asserted that the particular type of subsidy now under discussion before Congress resulted in payments to only high-cost producers with a resultant saving to both consumers and taxpayers.

Mr. Lippmann failed to distinguish between the type of subsidy which is being paid on such commodities as copper and the subsidies which are being paid on dairy products, meats and other agricultural commodities. It is true that subsidies in copper mining are paid only to high-cost producers, thereby resulting in a considerable saving over that which would be had if the price were allowed to rise for all producers to the level which would be necessary in order to get production from the high-cost mines. This incentive-payment type of subsidy is possible in industries like copper mining because there are comparatively few firms involved and because it is possible to secure reliable cost records from them.

The incentive payment, or subsidy which accrues only to the highest-cost producers, is not the sort which is being paid on most food and agricultural commodities at the present time. At present subsidies are being paid on various dairy products at approximately the following annual rates: cheese—3¾ cents per pound or 28 million dollars per year; butter—under the price rollback, 4½ cents per pound or approximately 100 million dollars per year; fluid milk and cream under the dairy payment program—approximately 350 million dollars per year; total, approximately 525 million dollars. With the exception of some very small differentials between broad regions under the dairy payment program every one of these dairy product subsidies are paid in equal amounts to producers irrespective of costs. And even in the dairy payment program every producer within broad geographic regions receives the same payment irrespective of his costs although it is well recognized that costs within a region vary between farms as much as they may vary between regions.

The same statement is true of the annual 350-million-dollar subsidy being paid on meats under the rollback program. The same may be said of the recently announced 100-million-dollar subsidy on bread, and other programs applying to food commodities. In none of these does the Government encourage greater production from high-cost producers with an attendant saving to the public treasury by applying a subsidy only to the higher-cost product.

Therefore, we contend that the whole thesis of Mr. Lippmann's article of this morning is out of order and in its effect misleading to the general public who have not had occasion to investigate the application of various subsidy programs now applied to agriculture. We feel confident that you have a sincere interest in seeing that this misintrepretation is corrected.

Subsidy Opponents

Congratulations on your fine editorial, "Reason on Subsidies," in the November 22 Post. Frankly, I think this is a matter so important that you should reprint this editorial.

Every argument offered by the opponents of the subsidy plan is false economy. It is evident that organized labor and the farm bloc are striving desperately to kill the subsidy plan. What a pity it is they cannot see beyond the end of their noses. Once the "Hold-the-Line Program" is broken and subsidies are eliminated, organized labor and the farmers will be the first to criticize the Administration.

Will somebody please tell these people and their leaders what has happened in foreign countries where inflation was not controlled? Will somebody convince these Congressmen who oppose subsidies what harm they are doing if this plan is destroyed? Finally, will somebody inform these politicians they are providing their political enemies with the finest kind of ammunition to be used against them in the forthcoming election? "The Democrats Gave Us Inflation" might easily be a weapon the Republicans would use. E. H. H.

Thankful America

We people of America have so much to be thankful for this Thanksgiving, words cannot begin to express as much gratitude as we owe for all the many things with which we have been blessed. Food of all kinds and in bounteous amounts, freedom from war's devastating blows to our homes and cities, freedom from want and starvation among our young and old, and perhaps as great as anything else, the privilege of still enjoying freedom of expression. Are we not blessed with heavenly riches, when so much of the world is in intense suffering and distress?

'Fraulein' Hess

By Paul Winkler

Hitler Misses Him

FROM NEUTRAL sources, two German reports have been received which, though they came through independently of one another, may be related.

The first is that Hitler is working on a book which he considers as a sequel to "Mein Kampf," and, in a sense, his political testament.

The second is that he is complaining bitterly about his inability to secure the release of Rudolf Hess. Through neutral intermediaries, a number of offers have been made to the British for his exchange, one of them being for the return of the only high British diplomatic officer held by the Germans, Sir Lancelot Oliphant, plus the five highest ranking British army officers. But every German overture has been repulsed.

Members of Hitler's entourage say that the Fuehrer superstitiously attributes his reverses since Hess' capture to the absence of "Rudi." They talk mysteriously of Hitler plans of "something big" to bring him back to the Reich. Whether this means a rescue a la Mussolini is anyone's guess. To those who think the Duce was freed because his captors were none too anxious to hold onto him, the likelihood of a similar kidnapping of Hess from England seems very slight.

Who Wrote "Mein Kampf?"

The possible relation between these two reports lies in the fact that Hitler would be likely to miss Hess particularly if he were writing a new "Mein Kampf," for Hess worked with him on that book, and it has often been suggested that his contribution to it was far greater than the role of secretary with which he is officially credited by the Nazi account. The one sure point about the authorship of "Mein Kampf" is that it was written in Landesberg prison, where Hitler and Hess were sharing not very onerous confinement for the abortive Munich Beer Hall putsch of 1923.

It has been stated that the original idea of writing the book was Hess'. What portion of it represents ideas of Hitler's and what part may be attributed particularly to Hess, no one knows. Their thinking was so much alike that it is possible that the book was a very complete collaboration, the product of two minds acting upon each other, rather than of one dominant and one subordinate mind. "Mein Kampf," indeed, may be a sample of the psychopathic phenomenon known as "folie a deux."

Hess has said on occasion that the passages on England were due to his influence, and that was one of the reasons he gave for believing that he would be successful when he made his flight to London. The English, he explained, knew that the comparatively kind words reserved for them in "Mein Kampf" had been inspired by him, and they would receive him as a friend. He proved to have erred.

Model of Self-Effacement

That Hess was willing to sink his own personality in that of Hitler, and uncomplainingly supply him with ideas, was the result of his own fanatic and mystical theories. He expressed them in a pamphlet which he wrote in 1920, one year after he joined Hitler, entitled, "What Sort of Man Will Arouse Germany?"

His conclusion was that the leader who would conduct Germany to victory would be a dictator, but one in whom love of country would be stronger than personal ambition. It seems probable that he had already come to the conclusion that Hitler was the man he was describing. Because he looked upon Hitler as the man whom destiny had selected to guide Germany, he decided to put all his talents, even his very thoughts, at the service of the Fuehrer, with complete disregard for self.

Hess' belief that Hitler was the man of destiny was shared by that other early Nazi with whom he had so much in common, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg. Rosenberg, however, never succeeded in getting as close to Hitler as did Hess, whose personal influence with the Fuehrer was unmatched by anyone. Hess came as close to being an alter ero of Hitler as any man can ever become part of the personality of another, and it is not surprising that the superstitious Fuehrer believes that the providential and proverbial luck which was his up to the time of Hess' loss, and has deserted him since was somehow bound up with the presence of Hess at his side.

German recognition of the relationship between Hitler and Hess was expressed in the nickname given the latter: "Fraulein"—"Miss." It has usually been supposed outside of Germany that this referred to a supposed effeminacy in Hess' character. Actually, the Germans applied this name to him because "Fraulein" is the name commonly given to maids, and they recognized Hess' attitude as that of a devoted and dutiful servant to his master.

Christmas Thanks

This little note is written because I believe it fitting and proper to thank The Post, and especially the "Little Old Lady," for thinking of the lonely boys overseas.

Your package was sent to Chaplain Ralph K. Wheeler, Seattle, Wash., and in turn was given to me as a Christmas gift. All I can say is many, mank thanks and God bless you, Little Old Lady. You are doing a wonderful thing.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Responsibility Of The German Nation

WE SHOULD dishonor ourselves and our cause if we did not face with a candid conscience our moral responsibility in the devastation of the German cities. For obviously we cannot be satisfied to say that we are now doing what the enemy did first. We reject his moral standards and therefore cannot stoop to justify our actions by his standards.

LIPPMANN

THE IMMEDIATE problem is clear enough: the German state through its armed might is holding captive, and indeed in slavery, most of the nations of Europe. Fortress Europe is a prison which must be opened not only by breaking down the prison doors but by attacking the jailers till they drop the keys to those doors. In attacking the German people whose sons are the jailers of Europe, many innocent Germans—women, children, and old folk—perish. But if we refrained from attacking the cities like Berlin, Hamburg, Cologne from which the subjugation of Europe is directed, implemented, and enforced, still more innocent people of all sorts in the captive nations must perish.

The destruction being visited upon civilian Germany is not, therefore, wanton in that it is indubitably a potent means of hastening the liberation of the victims of the German state. We could only spare Berlin at the cost of prolonging the agony of countless millions who are the victims of the power organized and directed from Berlin.

THERE WILL, we may suppose, be little argument among men of scrupulous conscience about this phase of the matter. But there is an ultimate question which reaches the moral basis of the terms to be imposed upon our enemies when they are defeated and have surrendered. It is how far the people of Germany are to be held responsible for the acts of the German state. The question is profound and it is complicated. But we must begin to seek sincerely and humbly for the right answer.

MUST WE NOT begin—and I say this as a genuine inquiry—by examining this question: if the German people—not individual Germans as such but the German people organized as a sovereign state—are a member of the society of nations, can we deny the responsibility of the German people for the acts of that state without denying them their claim to form a sovereign state? If it is true, as some maintain, that the German people are not accountable for the fact that the German state has been a criminal menace to the world, then it follows, does it not, that the German people are not fitted for self-government? How can they be accorded the rights of a sovereign nation without being accountable for the results?

If, therefore, it is to be argued that not the German nation but only Hitler and his gang are accountable, it would follow that when we remove Hitler and his gang, the Allies rather than the Germans must govern Germany, govern it beneficently and paternally if you like, but govern it. The argument for regarding the German nation as innocent is, if we really examine it, an argument which ends in the conclusion that however kindly we treat Germans as individuals, as an orgaized nation on German territory the Germans are incapable of, or unready for, independence. For the nation can not have the moral right of independence and sovereignty if the nation is to be absolved of moral responsibility.

It is often said that those who mean to hold the German nation responsible for the acts of the German state are unjust to the German nation. But in fact, as a matter of morals, the question at issue is whether the Germans as a nation are to be regarded as adults, endowed with reason and with freedom of will and therefore morally responsible, or whether they are to be regarded as wayward children or criminally insane, who, lacking the capacity to distinguish between right and grong, must be put in the custody of guardians.

When this ultimate issue is faced, we may see that those who wish to hold the German nation responsible are, though the material consequences may be hard, showing a higher human respect for the German nation and its future place in human society than are those who wish to treat the nation as morally irresponsible. For if the nation is to be treated as morally irresponsible, how can it ever be restored to an equal place among the nations?

THIS IS, I venture to suggest quite tentatively, the root of the matter. If it is, then there follows from it the question of how, if the German nation is held responsible, punishment may be limited to the minimum necessary to be deterrent and the conditions set for redemption.

The answer to that crucial question cannot be given by the Allies. If our fundamental principle is that the German nation is human, has freedom of will and is morally responsible, then the acts of the Germans can alone answer the question. In so far as they punish their criminal leaders, they will relieve the Allies of the burden of inflicting punishment. In so far as they themselves act with moral responsibility, which means doing acts of repentance and reparation, they will restore their right to sovereignty and their place in human society.

THERE IS "A Statement by the Ethics Committee of the Catholic Association for International Peace" which deals with the question of "Retributive Justice After the War". It should not be missed by any who wish to study this difficult question. I cannot summarize it here. But it begins with this passage from St. Augustine: "Just wars are usually defined as those which avenge injuries, when the nation or city against which warlike action is to be directed has neglected either to punish wrongs committed by its own citizens or to restore what has been unjustly taken by it."

This, if I read it correctly, is the doctrine of the moral responsibility of the nation for the acts of the state which governs it.

Nations Outline World Plan to Aid Stranded

Atlantic City, Nov. 26 (AP).—The greatest mass migration of people in history—and perhaps, the most dramatic passage in the world's history—began taking final shape, on paper, here today as the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration plans for the final armistice.

The rules are beng written in the hope that the war weary people will at last be able to live where they wish—whether they are Poles who now prefer France—Italian Jews who have come to love Holland—German Social Democrats who wish to stay in England—or just homesick people who want to live on the same old street, and take a gamble on freedom.

The committee has agreed that

Universal Aid to Stranded

The committee have agreed that UNRRA should accept responsibility for aiding citizens of countries who either have been driven or forced from their homes.

It had to consider a more complex group which has lived under more than two flags since the break of war, those for example who fled Germany to Greece and thence to Africa and those who went from China to Burma to Java.

These people, the committee decided, may desire to live in any one of the three, and should be permitted a choice. But it has agreed the government, in each case, must have the right to accept or refuse the war immigrant.

On that point, Sir George Rendel of the British delegation, said: "We all hope the governments will prove generous. England, I am sure, is ready to permit these refugees to remain who wish to do so."

Mammoth Pool Expected

There could conceivably be quite a pool of people who, disliking to return to their old country, and refused a home by the country of their choice, would be "stateless" for a period. They would receive UNRRA aid where they are, until their problems are resolved by the Interallied Committee for Refugees.

But the third group—the enemy people who will be found in other lands—proved such a knotty problem that the committee was unable to come to a final agreement on the use of the UNRRA funds for their transportation homeward.

It was merely agreed that they would be removed as soon as possible.

This discussion was highlighted by the Yugoslav Ambassador, Constantin Fotitch, who described the way Germans had driven Yugoslavs from their homes with nothing but the clothes they wore. He wished the Germans accorded the same treatment, and his feeling was general among the other delegates from invaded countries.

3-Point Plan May Ease Feed Shortage

By Christine Sadler

A three-way attack on the Nation's feed shortage problem, particularly as it affects dairy and poultry farmers of the East, was under way yesterday. These were the main developments:

1. The House Ways and Means Committee approved a resolution to suspend for 90 days all import duties on wheat, oats, barley, rye, cottonseed, flax and hay.
2. The OPA appeared ready to raise the price ceiling on corn from $1.07 a bushel, Chicago basis, to a point between $1.14 and $1.22 per bushel—to encourage movement of this high-protein feed from hog farms to dairy farms.
3. The WFA announced a program designed to help North Atlantic farmers receive the 200 million bushels of feed grains they will need during the next 10 months "in order to meet production goals for meats, milk and eggs."

Great Lakes Shipments

Without accepting responsibility for getting the total amount delivered, WFA said 40 million bushels would have been shipped into the area over the Great Lakes by the close of navigation in September and said arrangements have been made to store 15 million bushels of feed wheat on ships at lower lake ports, to be moved into consumption during the winter months as a supplement to cargoes being received by rail.

Approximately 100 million bushels will have to be shipped by rail and some shipments already are under way, WFA said. The remainder of the quota will be shipped over the lakes next year, according to WFA plans.

During the first two weeks of November, WFA said, approximately two million bushels of corn were shipped into the area, with WFA making payments of 5 cents a bushel to make up the difference between ceiling prices of the feed in surplus and deficit areas, the agency said.

Releasing Wheat

In addition to the subsidized corn shipments, WFA is making wheat from Government stocks available to the area at the rate of six million bushels each month, it was announced, and since July has brought for importation into this country the following amounts of feed; 39 million bushels of wheat from Canada, 56,000 tons of wheat and 18,000 tons of barley from Argentina and 39,000 tons of cottonseed from Brazil.

"The bulk of the tonnage has gone or will go to feeders in the North Atlantic States," WFA said.

Another food-front development yesterday was the release to civilians of 2,600,000 cases of canned string beans and tomatoes from 1943 packs, to be sold through regular commercial channels.

Green D, E, F Stamps Valid Dec. 1-Jan. 20

Green stamps D, E and F in War Ration Book 4 will be valid for processed food purchases from December 1 through January 20, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

Stamps A, B and C in the same book, valid since November 1, will be good through December 20, providing the usual overlap period.

Rail Unions Wait Congress' Action on Pay

Danger of a Nation-wide railroad strike in the immediate future lessened considerably yesterday as Labor, weekly publication of the railroad unions, stated that "no drastic action" was planned while Congress was considering the railroad wage case.

The publication quoted union chiefs as stressing the desire of all concerned for "a peaceful settlement."

Meanwhile, members of the 15 nonoperating rail unions completed a strike ballot in protest against wage decisions of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson and reported preliminary tabulations showing an "almost 100 per cent "vote for a walkout."

"Real Danger," Unions Warn

Simultaneously, the unions issued a report to the public warning that the strike threat represented a "real danger."

Accusing Vinson's office of a "persistent attempt to force an impractical and unsound wage settlement on the railway industry," the report stated, "the old safeguards which made railway labor crises seem false alarms are no longer operative."

Congress has before it a resolution sponsored by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri to place into effect an August 7 agreement between the carriers and rail unions providing an 8-cent-an-hour wage increase.

Vinson has refused to approve the contract on the ground that it contravenes the Administration's wage stabilization policies, but has approved an emergency board recommendation providing for a "sliding scale" wage adjustment, from 10 cents an hour for those making 46 cents an hour, tapered to a 4-cent boost for those making 97 cents an hour or more.

Senate Approval Expected

The Truman resolution has been approved by a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and is expected to go to the full committee for certain approval Tuesday unless a compromise is worked out meanwhile.

Efforts are being made to secure a compromise agreement retaining the Vinson "sliding scale" principle, but tapering down to 7 cents an hour, instead of to 4 cents.

President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announced in Cleveland that leaders of the operating unions would meet there next Friday to "consider peaceful and legal means of withdrawing our members from their jobs in the event a satisfactory solution to our wage problems is not reached."

Both groups will meet in Washington next Wednesday for a routine session of the Railway Labor Executives Association at which possible strike strategy may be discussed.

Coal Deadlock Up to Ickes as 'Captives' Yield

By Ben W. Gilbert

Action by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes to break the coal wage deadlock appeared likely yesterday as Southern Appalachian coal producers became the only group resisting the making of a new nation-wide agreement with President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

Representatives of steel-company-owned "captive" mines made an initial appearance at the conference at the invitation of Ickes and a spokesman revealed that they had joined with Northern Appalachian, Indiana, Illinois and trans-Mississippi coal producers to urge that a contract based on the Ickes-Lewis agreement be signed.

First Time in History

The belated appearance of the "captives" made the conference industry-wide for the first time in coal-mining history.

The Ickes-Lewis pact was signed to end the fourth general coal strike—for the duration of Government operation only. Current negotiations are to replace the pact with an agreement which will facilitate a return of the mines to their owners.

Lewis has indicated his willingness to work out a contract based on his agreement with Ickes, but has refused to negotiate with only a portion of the coal operators, pointing out that he already has a national agreement—with Ickes.

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Appalachian operators, issued a statement asserting that the Ickes-Lewis agreement would "fall of its own weight" and be rejected when submitted to the War Labor Board.

Standing Pat

Burke reaffirmed his position in favor of a return to the old method of computing coal mine pay to require 8 hours work each day, mining coal from every miner. The Ickes-Lewis agreement requires each miner to put in an 8¾-hour "portal to portal" day, with the time actually spent mining coal varying with the underground "travel time."

The conference adjourned after hearing Burke's statement until Monday at 11 a. m. when Ickes is expected to appear.

Conference spokesmen reported yesterday's developments to Ickes and invited him to make the address in hopes of breaking the deadlock.

Paper Saving Asked

War Production Chairman Donald Nelson yesterday asked the American Retail Federation to request its 500,000 affiliated stores to eliminate frills in Christmas wrappings to conserve paper needed for war purposes.

Good-Neighbor Policy Attacked

referred to "misrepresentation" of the sums spent by the U. S. in Latin America and said:

"All expenditures and commitments to spend during the past three years by all Government agencies, including military and naval installations, total less than 600 million dollars in Latin America."

3. McKellar angrily challenged Butler's figures and his right to deliver the report to the Senate. McKellar said his "figures in hand" showed that the United States had spent only $2,700,000,000 in Latin America. The veteran Tennessean's attempt to exclude the report failed when Butler introduced letters to show he represented both the Truman and Byrd committees on his 20,000 mile investigative trip.

4. Representative Stefan (Republican) of Nebraska called for an investigation by the House Appropriations Committee of U. S. spending in Latin America before the new State Department appropriations were granted.

5. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin also demanded a thorough inquiry into the Butler charges. Meanwhile, reports of the Midwest Senator's findings were forwarded to the Truman and Byrd committees.

In Latin America, Butler charged, "a host of little WPAs, PWAs, WPSs, FSAs and AAAs have been spawned by the New Deal during the past two years."

"It is clear," he said, "that the New Deal program has been neither abolished nor adjourned, but merely transplanted to Latin America.

"Harry Hopkins, as chairman of the Munitions Assignments Board, gives away lend-lease materials; Howard Hunter and David Saposs, two of Hopkins' former right-hand men in the WPA, have found new worlds to conquer in Latin America."

Butler's 176-page report contained a blunt discussion of conditions in Latin American countries, including what he found to be the effect of U. S. spending there.

He charged that at best Latin Americans regarded Uncle Sam as "a sucker," while many others viewed U. S. activities with suspicious mistrust.

Referring to some of this country's policies as "based on sentimental dreams," Butler asserted that only three of the 20 "so-called democracies can fairly be called democracies."

Rest Dictatorships

"All the rest," he said, "are dictatorships of the most autocratic sort, and generally militaristic dictatorships at that." He charged rampant graft by Latin American officials handling U. S. funds and said U. S. money was creating competition for this country's own products in Latin America.

Butler further asserted that the United States is furnishing arms it badly needs itself to some of the Latin American countries who plan to use them only against each other. He said Paraguay was preparing for war now, hoping to get enough lend-lease military supplies to march on Argentina, start a battle and somehow involve Brazil.

Critical of much "Good Neighbor" propaganda, the Nebraska Senator indicated that just as Latin America receives a false picture of the United States, the reverse is equally true. He said much is written about the top 20 million of Latin America's population, but nothing about the submerged 100 million, "bound by ignorance, frustrated by political oblivion, weakened by disease, filled with lassitude from decades of poor diet, indolent from habit, and forgotten or ignored by their leaders."

"The military cliques in Latin America's dictator countries are reinforced and aided to stay in power through the vast military supplies we give them," Butler said.

Butler Tells Story Of Mixed Blueprints

As an example of the "confusion worse confounded" he charged New Dealers with creating in Latin America, Senator Butler yesterday told the following story:

A construction engineer got his blueprints mixed up. He was given two sets—one for a hotel, the other for a railroad station. In the shuffle of conflicting instructions he built the hotel in the railroad yards in Antilla, Cuba, and the railroad station on the hotel site in a totally different city.

In Yucatan, Mexico, Butler saw American "propaganda movies." First on the list was a film on "How to select the best yacht for various pleasure purposes."

Home Rule Bill Hearings Are Delayed

Senate District Committee hearings on home rule in the District have been postponed from next Tuesday to December 7 because Chairman McCarran is unable to return to the Capital from a series of Western hearings until Monday, it was announced yesterday on Capitol Hill.

The Nevada Senator has been conducting meetings throughout the West for the last month and it is said, has been delayed by transportation difficulties in his return from the Pacific Coast. Hence, to give him and the committee ample opportunity to clear the calendar of District measures requiring attention, the suffrage hearings were postponed one week.

Specifically, they will cover two measures:

1. A bill prepared after 10 months' work by McCarran, to grant District residents the right to vote for a seven-man Board of Commissioners, who in turn would appoint a city manager.

2. A resolution introduced by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon to form a charter commission by which Washingtonians could choose their own form of administration.

Although there has been no official word from McCarran, it is believed that the hearings also will include consideration of a second Holman bill, a simplification of the first, to provide a three-man charter commission to submit a District charter to the Congress.

Liberty Vessel Hugh M. Smith Is Christened

The Liberty ship S. S. Hugh M. Smith, named for the late Prof. Hugh M. Smith of Washington, was launched in Baltimore yesterday, the 251st of its kind built in that city to date.

Christening the vessel, built by Bethlehem-Fairfield, was 12-year-old Alice Moira Cowdry, of St. Louis, Mo., granddaughter of the famed ichthyologist and teacher at Georgetown University who died two years ago.

Born in Washington in 1865, Prof. Smith was a director of the Biological Laboratory of the U. S. Fish Commission (now the Bureau of Fisheries) and deputy commissioner of fisheries. He held the chair of normal histology at Georgetown from 1895 to 1902.

Car of Onions Arrives; 3 More in Sight

One carload of onions arrived in the city yesterday to bring slight relief to the current onion shortage which has harassed housewives for the past two weeks, produce dealers said.

Normally the city consumes about eight carloads a week but Government reports show that less than four are expected soon. The car yesterday was from New York.

Some dealers, in an attempt to obtain a supply of onions for use in the Thanksgiving turkey dressing, even imported them from Minnesota, where they were forced to take half a carload of potatoes in order to obtain half a car of onions, it was learned.

The potatoes from Minnesota were of extremely poor quality and were a drug on the market, or, in some instances, unmarketable, dealers said.

Dealers of long standing here, however, said they were compelled to obtain some onions in order to fill the needs of regular customers. Selling the onions at a ceiling of $2.45 for 50 pounds, they took a loss on the money they had been compelled to pay for the spuds.

The Gallup Poll

Governor Bricker Is Heavy Favorite in Ohio, His Home State, for GOP Nomination in 1944

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 26.—Republican leaders casting a sympathetic eye toward Gov. John W. Bricker as the presidential nominee in 1944 can launch his campaign with the talking point that Ohio's three-time Governor leads all other Republican possibilities by a wide margin in his home State.

Certainly, no other candidate will be likely to risk his political fortunes by entering the Ohio primaries against Governor Bricker.

A poll just completed by the Institute in all parts of Ohio establishes the fact that as of today Bricker gets more than twice as many votes as the next highest candidate, Governor Dewey of New York.

This is shown by replies when Republican rank and file voters throughout the State were asked which of six men mentioned frequently as Republican presidential possibilities they would prefer?

Following is the vote:

Bricker	40%
Dewey	18
Willkie	16
MacArthur	16
Taft	7
Stassen	3

Governor Bricker's chief task all along has been to make himself better known among the rank and file in sections of the country other than the Midwest. The present poll leaves no doubt about what the people of Ohio, who do know him, think about him as 1944 presidential timber.

Another indication of Governor Bricker's strength in his home State is revealed in the attitude of his constituents toward him as a governor.

In an earlier poll, when asked what kind of job they think Governor Bricker is doing, only 8 per cent of the voters said they thought he has done a poor job; nearly 50 per cent called his job outstanding or better than average.

Danaher Submits New Bill To Give Servicemen Vote

By the Associated Press

An attempt to junk a proposed Federal war ballot for men and women in the service and let them designate a back-home proxy for next year's presidential election was launched in the Senate yesterday.

It was the newest attack against the battered Green-Lucas bill, which provides for ballots to be cast at the war fronts under the general supervision of a Federal ballot commission.

The new plan, sponsored by Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut would permit military personnel to mark their choices for President, Vice President, Senator and Congressman on a special blank and send it sealed to a friend or relative at home who would cast the ballot on election day.

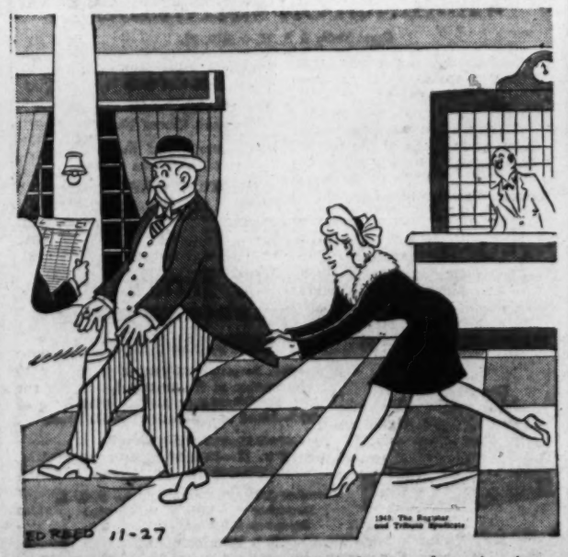

Advocates said the proposal assured that the wartime ballots would be cast in the home district of the service voter.

(An Associated Press story from Naples yesterday said troops overseas are already demanding information about candidates, party election programs and what is being said about controversial issues. The service newspaper Stars and Stripes is working on the problem of giving this news as adequately as space limitations permit.)

Danaher retained under another name, the war ballot commission of two Republicans and two Democrats proposed in the Green-Lucas Bill.

Religion in the News And News in Religion

Twenty-five thousand dollars for the relief of famine sufferers in India is being sent by the Protestant churches of North America as a "token gift" to the National Christian Council of India, according to an announcement issued today by Sue Weddell, secretary of the India Committee of the Foreign Misions Conference of North America.

"We know this amount is only a drop in the bucket of the terrible need," says Miss Weddell, "but it goes as a gesture of concern and Christian interest in the welfare of the Indian people. Their living, always meager, has been cut to the point of actual starvation in many cases by war-imposed limits on transportation facilities and by recent floods in many parts of the country. This initial gift will be followed by larger gifts later if the need continues."

On receipt of a cable from Rajah Manikam, Secretary of the National Christian Council of India, the plight of the Indian people was presented before meetings of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. An appeal went out by wire to the foreign missions boards of the Protestant denominations having work in India.

Response to Plea Is Immediate

Response was immediate, the first check for $1000 being in hand the following day. Within 48 hours 15 denominations had contributed a total of over $10,000. With checks promised by mission boards in distant parts of the country, the goal of $25,000 is assured.

Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, foreign counsellor for the Church Committee on Overseas Relief and Reconstruction, representing over a score of Protestant denominations, has been contacting the State Department, urging that the Government take all possible steps to get supplies to the stricken area. The major problem is one of supplying grain for the famine districts, but shipping from areas of supply, such as the United States, Canada and Australia presents great difficulties in war time. The government has given assurance of all possible cooperation in helping to solve the practical obstacles.

America Red Cross Assists Committee

The committee is also in touch with the American Red Cross which has made inquiries of the India Red Cross regarding assistance needed. Action awaits reply from India.

British mission boards and churches are raising a fund for India famine sufferers similar to that raised by the American churches.

One effective agency already at work in Bengal is the American Friends Service Committee. According to John Rich, executive of that committee, just returned from a trip to China and India, 24 Quakers are now working in Bengal. The Friends have sent $5000 to India in the last six months, and are now negotiating to buy $30,000 of wheat in the South African market, to ship in to the famine areas.

Food for the feeding stations now operating is furnished by the Calcutta government. One of the Friends is an assistant to the minister of supplies. There are 12 or more feeding stations in Calcutta, serving one meal a day to about 100 children each. Work is done largely by volunteer Indian women. Meals consist of rice, boiled grain, green vegetables, meat or egg. The meal costs 2 annas (4 cents), is sold to the children for 1 piece (½ cent).

Chaplains Held in Unity Role

Chaplains on the fighting fronts hold the major role in unification of the Protestant religions, Dr. William Barrow Pugh, delegate of American Protestantism to a score of war areas in the past three months, asserted yesterday.

PUGH

Dr. Pugh, chairman of the General Commission of Army and Navy Chaplains, who left Washington August 15 to continue the overseas tour begun by the late Bishop Adna W. Leonard, explained that while the Protestant churches at home still function as separate entities, "the spirit of unity in the work of chaplains of all faiths abroad is unparalleled."

Declaring that he had probably preached in more places in less time than any other minister in the world, Dr. Pugh said he had conferred with about 1200 chaplains of every faith and found the same spirit of cooperation wherever he went.

Questioned about the Patton skirmish involving the general's slapping of a wounded soldier, Dr. Pugh said he heard conflicting rumors of the incident wherever he went, but added he had been unable to note its effect on troop morale.

When he talked with General Patton at his headquarters in Palermo last September, no mention of the affair was made, but Dr. Pugh said he felt that Patton was conscious of the "common gossip" centered on him. Patton talked at length on "taking care of the American soldier," the former chaplain added.

Characterizing Patton as "the rough and ready type" who interspersed cusswords with quotations from the Bible, he said "he has that attitude that he is always right"

Dr. Pugh, who will begin lecturing on his tour next week, will not make recommendations on his findings until a meeting of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, December 8.

Dr. Wenchel Serves 35 Years

Lutherans of Washington will honor Dr. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, and Mrs. Wenchel, at a reception tomorrow commemorating his 35th anniversary as minister of the church he still serves.

WENCHEL

The reception will be in the Sunday School Hall of the church at 16th and Gallatin sts. nw., between 5 and 7 p. m.

At 7 p. m. Dr. O. Sauer of Richmond, Va., vice president of the Southeast District of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church, will deliver a sermon commemorating the occasion.

Dr. Wenchel was ordained 45 years ago, and served congregations at Tampa, Fla., and Boston, Mass., before taking up the pastorate of Christ's Church in 1908.

When Dr. Wenchel first came to Washington services were conducted in the basement of his parsonage. Later a church edifice was constructed at New Jersey ave. and Morgan st. nw. Services were conducted there until 1931 when the present church was constructed on 16th st. to take care of the membership that has multiplied several times since 1908.

D. C. Churches Urged to Aid Salvage Plan

Congregations of all faiths here are being urged to support the national discarded clothing and rag salvage program by the D. C. Salvage Committee of the WPB. The drive runs through December 4.

Horace Walker, executive secretary of the D. C. Salvage Committee, in issuing instructions to religious organizations about the drive, urges appointment of women's groups within the church to be responsible for the program.

He suggests that a suitable place be found in the church or parish hall or school hall where clothing and rags may be accumulated, and arrange regular hours when the collection depot will be open to the public.

After the committee has sorted the usable clothing and rags, all rags, including unusable clothing, may be sold to regular dealers and the money realized from the sale used for whatever purpose the church committee desires.

The sorted usable clothing will be turned over to one of the charities, of the church's choosing. Charities participating in the collection will be the Salvation Army, Goodwill Industries, Red Cross and Volunteers of America. The charity collecting agency may ratain 10 per cent of the usable clothing collected to be used in local aid and relief.

Among the prominet churchmen on the National Discarded Clothing and Rag Salvage Committee are Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary; Canon W. Curtis Draper, of the Washington Cathedral, and the Very Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church and director of Washington Catholic Charities.

Trinity Episcopal Will Mark 50th Year of Present Edifice

The 50th anniversary of the first service held in Trinity Episcopal Church in its present location at Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw. will be commemorated with a celebration tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Rev. Reno S. Harp, jr., rector, will preach.

HARP

Those expected to assist are the Rev. H. Allen Griffith, under whose leadership the First Trinity Church was built and opened for service on November 26, 1893, the Rev. C. M. Young, the rector emeritus of the parish, and the Rev. Henry C. Parkman, formerly dean of the Southern convocation.

A highlight of the observance will be the marking of the completion of the payment of all parish indebtedness which resulted from the building program inaugurated by the present rector in 1936. About $85,000 has been spent in the erection of the present Gothic stone church and rectory of similar construction.

The church, now one of the strongest of the suburban parishes, has a membership of over 800. Strongly missionary in spirit, the congregation has made gifts of increasing amounts each year to the support of the program of the whole church. The present rector came to the parish in December, 1935. He is active in diocesan affairs, being the chairman of the department of missions, a member of the executive council and of the department of finance and the chairman of the dispatch of business of the convention.

HOW can we understand the NATURE of FIRE EXCEPT FROM ITS HEAT AND ITS LIGHT? Were not HEAT and LIGHT in this FIRE, naturally we could not say that the fire existed. The ROAD to ATTAIN to TRUTH is the LOVE of GOD. When the LIGHT of the LOVE of GOD is BURNING in the MIRROR of the HEART, that FLAME SHOWS THE WAY, and GUIDES to the KINGDOM of the WORD of GOD. As to THAT which CAUSES the GROWTH of the LOVE of GOD—know that IT IS TO TURN ONE'S SELF TOWARDS GOD."

Hampton Anniversary Fete Ends Tomorrow

The 75th anniversary of the founding of Hampton Institute will be brought to a close by Hampton alumni tomorrow at 8 p. m. at John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, 14th and Corcoran sts. nw.

Sponsored by the American Missionary Society, the school was founded by young Brig. Gen. Samuel Chapman Armstrong. On April 1, 1868, in the scattered buildings of Little Scotland plantation in the old town of Hampton, Va., 15 Negro students met in the first class of the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute.

Incorporated under the laws of the State in 1870, Hampton Institute, according to its charter, was to be devoted to "the instruction of youth in the various common school, academic and collegiate branches, the best methods of teaching same, and the best mode of practical industry in its application to agriculture and the mechanical arts."

Teachers Prepared

From the beginning, the preparation of teachers was a major element in the school's program. The Teachers' Institute, which is the forerunner of Summer School, was begun as early as 1876, and through this means, as well as regular classes, Hampton Institute prepared its students not only to earn their living but to teach and lead others as well. The outstanding teacher-alumnus of the period was Booker T. Washington.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools rated the Institute as a Class "A" college in 1933, and it was in the latter year that the Institute was also rated a standard college by the Virginia State Department of Education. The Association of American Colleges accepted Hampton as a member in 1935.

Christian Principles

Scholastic achievement alone, however, never became the sole concern of Hampton Institute. Skillful hands, and a heart inspired with the Christian principles of tolerance, brotherhood, and service will not cease to be the goal for which workers and students alike strive.

The Alumni Association, making material and spiritual contributions to the welfare of the Institute, has been and is today a vigorous and important factor in all phases of Hampton Institute's development.

At its "Educational Program" Sunday night, the association will bring to a close the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the school. This program, for the benefit of the public, points out to all that not forgetting the arts of peace, and firm in the conviction of her destiny, Hampton Institute still stands ready for service, with a wise and sane tradition of 75 years behind her and a vigorous program for the future.

Christian Science Theme Is Magic

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Angels are pure thoughts from God, winged with Truth and Love, no matter what their individualism may be." (Page 298.)

Army, Navy Scrap Unity of Action Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Down in Annapolis the other day, Head Coach John Whelchel broke stride as he walked from a Navy practice session with a group of football correspondents. He stopped, reached down, plucked a four-leaf clover and displayed it proudly, saying "that's the way to win football games."

POVICH

It was entirely logical comment, at that. With the Army game coming up, any little thing that would swerve the breaks was valuable. Whelchel's team will go on the field tomorrow the favorite, but he'd like to have the breaks, too. He knows that one smile from Dame Fortune is worth more than all the coaching strategy, especially in a close ball game.

Whelchel is refusing to consider his team as the favorite to best Army. He calls this one "the best Army team since 1916," and says "Army has the better and faster backs." But the Cadets and coaching staff at West Point are wary of Whelchel's flattery. "He talked us out of the game last year with all that praise of how good we were and that guff about his poor, weak Navy team."

Like most other coaches of the moaning school, Whelchel's lachrymose bleatings are for public consumption only, for any effect they may have on the opposition. To his football players, he never minimizes them. "I'll never say we haven't got a chance to win, even if we figure to get licked by 100 points," he says. He never goes so far as to instill any inferiority complex in his squad.

Earl Blaik, Army's coach, always will think he should have licked Navy last year when West Point took the field a 3 to 1 favorite. He thinks they'll win tomorrow, if they are geared up to the game. "It will take everything we've got, but I have a feeling we're ready," he says.

There isn't a line-pulverizing back on either team, unless it's Red Sullivan, of Navy, who specializes at the short bucks. Navy's scoring threat lies in the smart passing of 150-pound Babe Hamberg, and Army all season has been weak on pass-defense. Glenn Davis, Army's scoring punch, runs outside the tackles and is a slicer, not a plunger.

Until a couple of weeks ago, it was supposed that you could stop Army by stopping Davis, but Davis' backfield colleagues are now commanding more respect. Tom Lombardo can take over Davis' passing duties with much more than a pale resemblance, and Navy has to fear also the running of durable Carl Anderson and George Maxon.

The fastest backs on both clubs are not regulars, incidentally. Pettit, of Navy, and Bob Woods of Army, haven't been able to break into the starting backfields. In Woods' case it is something of a compliment to the other Army backs. Woods was a regular with Navy in 1941 before he bilged out of the Academy. Then he transferred to West Point and was an Army regular last year. This season, he can't make the Army first team which is a pretty fair commentary on the calibre of Blaik's first-line backs.

Navy was powerless to stop Notre Dames T-formation, but that may be easily tossed out of consideration in reckoning tomorrow's contest against the Army T-attack. Army, as a first year recruit to T ranks, does not have the smooth execution of Notre Dame, nor the talent to man it like the Irish. The T-formation, when it isn't clicking, is not very impressive.

There is no disposition, though, to consider that Navy had it tougher against Notre Dame than Army because Angelo Bertelli was in the Irish lineup at Cleveland. Army wasn't called upon to face Bertelli's passing, but even Bertelli could have posed no greater a threat than Johnny Lujack who replaced him against Army. Lujack did everything that Bertelli could do, on that day, at least, even surpassing him defensively.

Navy is better equipped in one spot than Army, and that is in the tail-back position where big, 190-pound Bob Jenkins can spell Babe Hamberg without much loss in Navy passing efficiency. Jenkins, the former Alabama back, is in addition, perhaps Navy's best ball carrier.

Certainly it points up as the best Army-Navy game in a decade, with the Eastern championship riding on the result. Rarely have the service teams come up to the annual game so hard to separate and with such impressive seasons behind them. If it lacks the roaring crowd because of its locale at West Point, then at least it is more picturesque. It should be a beaut.

Navy Choice Over Army Team Today

By Caswell Adams

New York, Nov. 26 (INS).—The Army and the Navy will meet tomorrow in the big game of this final day of this curious wartime football campaign. And the Midshipmen from the shores of the Severn, down Annapolis way, are favored slightly by the experts who know about such technicalities. Personally, Army is my choice.

This game will be played in the comparative privacy of West Point's Michie Stadium. This is because of a War Department order which prevented public show and limited the tickets to the lucky few who live within 10 miles of the Gray Stone Ramparts of the Military Academy.

Both teams have been drubbed thoroughly by Notre Dame's mighty outfit, and Army was held to a tie by Pennsylvania, which subsequently felt the Navy power in no uncertain manner. But from this eyrie, Army seems to pack the faster runners, and the Notre Dame players were practically unanimous in saying that the Army line was stronger than that of the Middies.

Minor and Maxon and Davis and Kenna and Lombardo are good backs with plenty of speed foot. Hamberg of the Navy is good, too, but not enough to get by the Army line.

It looks like a sure thing that the Iowa aval Seahawks will beat Minnesota, and preserve their right to second ranking spot behind Notre Dame, which ought to have first half, and only first half, trouble with Great Lakes.

Don't Look Now, Middies, But There's Something Behind You

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Passing through Baltimore yesterday en route to West Point for the big game with Army today, three of Navy's ace backs stopped by the newsstand. They didn't notice that Army banner hanging there but the alert photographer did and this is the result. Left to right they are Ben Martin, Hal Hamberg and Hillis Hume. Could it be an omen?

Service Game Will Decide Title in East

By Shirley Povich

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The United States Army and Navy, proud of the unity of action of their fighting forces all over the world, are awaiting a violent battle at cross purposes tomorrow—the 60-minute interlude that serves up the annual Army-Navy football game.

Players of both squads are housed tonight in nearby Bear Mountain Inn, removed from the campus clamor that all week has surcharged the atmosphere at Annapolis and West Point as the game neared. Navy coaches bedded down their 52-man squad after a workout today. Army has a squad of 48 men.

The undisputed collegiate championship of the East is riding on the result of tomorrow's game in which Navy will take the field as a slight favorite. Only one defeat mars the record of both teams, traceable in each case to their battles with the Notre Dame powerhouse.

Roaring Throng Absent

The traditional roaring throng will be absent for the second consecutive year, by White House directive, which in the interest of travel curb has ordered the game played on the campus with tickets limited to inhabitants of a 10-mile radius of West Point. Michie Stadium's seating capacity of 26,000 is expected to be no more than half filled. A lend-lease cheering section of Army cadets will sing the Navy songs, roar the Navy yells, much as it hurts.

Unless other developments crowd them from the spotlight, Navy's Hal Hamberg and Army's Glenn Davis will be the contestants in an individual battle behind the two big lines. They throw the passes for the two teams and they both run, Hamberg rated the better passer and Davis the better runner.

Army is aching for victory tomorrow, still chagrined by its upset defeat at the Naval Academy last year and the four straight lickings by Navy since 1938.

Army, a convert to T-formation ranks this season, comes up to the game with a great depth of backfield men spearheaded by Plebe Davis, whose breakaway runs have featured the West Point attack all season. Carl Anderson, George Maxon and Tom Lombardo, big and fast, will take more speed into the game than Navy's backs.

From the single wing formation, Navy backs operate behind a line that has overpowered every opponent except Notre Dame. Hamberg and Willis Hume are the busy backs of the Navy quartet of starters, with Coach John Whelchel having a handy replacement for Hamberg both in his passing and ball-carrying capacities in Bob Jenkins, former University of Alabama back.

Line Not at Peak

Navy Coach Whelchell maintains that Navy's line is not at its peak for tomorrow's game with Tackle Whitmire, and Linemen Chase and Schwartz ailing from the influenza that has been plaguing the Navy squad.

Hamberg will take a better passing record than Davis into the game but the West Point plebe, despite missing one game because of poor grades and being effectively stopped by Yale and Notre Dame, has accounted for more than 30 per cent of the ground gained by the Army attack this season.

The game will draw perhaps the smallest crowd in its history, but it will have the largest radio audience of any contest ever played, with the networks short-waving the play by play to every military and naval outpost and men at sea.

Great Lakes Last Test for Unbeaten N.D.

Great Lakes, Ill., Nov. 26 (AP).—An unquestioned claim to the national championship and its first undefeated, untied season since 1930 would be Notre Dame's tomorrow with a victory over Great Lakes, and few doubt the Irish chances—except thousands of sailor recruits at this naval training station.

Out here along the North Lake front, where Uncle Sam is training a great bulk of the boys who operate his men o' war, the kids like Lieut. Paul (Tony) Hinkle's football team and think it has a good, ripe opportunity to block Notre Dame's bid for its tenth and final triumph of a great year.

Unfortunately only a fraction of the trainees will be able to jam into the Ross Field Stadium, with its temporary bleachers and its corps of WAVES cheer leaders. But the 22,000 lucky ones will be better off than any civilian in these parts, because it's an all-Navy show.

Like the Iowa Seahawks, who last week held the Irish to a 14-13 win, Great Lakes has a big, mature team which might cause Notre Dame a lot of trouble, but the Irish have dabbled in trouble all season and made a great sport of it. Adversity seems to take a licking when Johnny Lujack, Jim Mello, Julie Rykovich, Creighton Miller and associates dig in their cleats.

The Sailors dropped only one game to Purdue, 23-13, and were beaten only by Northwestern, 13-0, in three away-from-home appearances. So the record is nine wins and two losses going into this final game.

Oddly enough Notre Dame, which will have played to some 503,000 spectators in 10 games, gets nothing financially from this contest, which originally was scheduled for Chicago's Comiskey Park as the fifth Irish "home" affair.

Probable line-ups:

Notre Dame.	Position.	Great Lakes.
Limont	L.E.	Schwarting
White	L.T.	Fersich
Filley	L.G.	Letlow
Coleman	Center	Sabas
Petro	R.G.	Bertagnolli
Czarobski	R.T.	Martin
Yonaker	R.E.	Martin
Lujack	Q.B.	Anderson
Miller	L.H.	Jones
Rykovich	R.H.	Sitko
Mello	F.B.	Proctor

Fitzsimmons Remains Phils' Boss on Field

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP).—Freddy Fitzsimmons, who took over the reins of the faltering Phillies from Bucky Harris' hands in the middle of last season, will be "absolutely boss on the field" next year, his new boss promised him today.

The former Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher "gets what he wants as long as the money holds out," he was assured at a press conference following his first meeting with the club's new owner, 28-year-old Robert R. M. Carpenter, jr.

"What Fred says goes," declared Carpenter, who replaced the ousted William D. Cox. "I mean that he'll be in the same position as the head coach of a football team."

Can Be Flag Winners

Fitzsimmons, who signed a contract for next year during the Cox regime, agreed with Carpenter that it will take "at least five years" to make the Phillies a pennant-caliber club—but said he was confident it can be done.

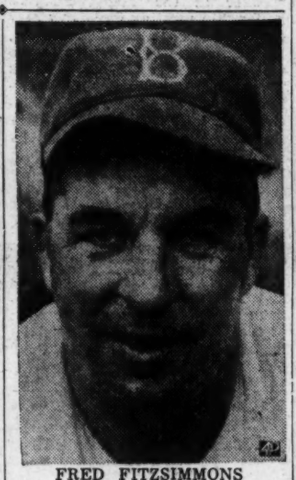

In the meantime: "We all know that the club needs a shortstop and catcher," Fat Freddie said. "The pitching is going to be very good and the outfield looks pretty good but we are on the lookout for anything promising.

"I am planning to use Glenn Russell at third, Charlie Letchas at second and either Babe Dahlgren or Jim Wasdell at first. We haven't discussed any trades yet."

Authority Not Delegated

Asked whether Herb Pennock, invited by Carpenter to become general manager, would have authority over Freddy's management, the president replied, "That has not been decided because Herb hasn't said yet whether he wants the job."

Fitzsimmons, looking fit but tired from long hours managing his Brooklyn and Sheepshead Bay bowling alleys, announced that Chuck Klein and Mervin Shea, now manager of the Portland, Oreg., club, will be coaches, while Leo (Red) Miller, Winter Park, Fla., who now is training the Georgetown University football squad, will be conditioner.

FRED FITZSIMMONS

Wilmington Club Disposition Up to Mack

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP).—Robert R. M. Carpenter, jr., new president of the Phillies, said today that Connie Mack can make any decision he likes on disposition of the Wilmington Interstate League Club, owned jointly by the two.

"That's absolutely up to Mack," he said at a press conference. "He's been fine to me and I'll do anything he likes about it."

Fine Tackles Display Wares In Pro Game

Two of the finest looking rookie tackles of the year will display their wares tomorrow at Griffith Stadium when the pestiferous Phil-Pitt Eagles come in to torment the Redskins before another sell-out crowd of over 35,000.

While Washingtonians have been acclaiming Lou Rymkus, 223-pound giant from Notre Dame, as the best looking rookie lineman in the league, "Greasy" Neale, Eagle coach, has been calling his Frank Kilroy, a 240-pound first year man who formerly played with Temple, as the best. Kilroy has won the right tackle berth from Al Whitert, who was an almost unanimous All-American choice at Michigan and who, earlier in the season, was touted as one of the finest young linemen to come up in years.

The pesky Eagles, only team the Redskins have failed to whip this year, earned a 14-14 deadlock in their meeting in Philadelphia earlier in the season. Led by Roy Zimmerman, one of three former Redskins, the Eagles want this game badly.

Coach Neale will establish a precedent by bringing the team in today and take up quarters at the Willard rather than have the players, as in former years, undergo the train ride from Philadelphia in the early hours of Sunday morning. Ed Michaels, who starts at right guard, and Tex Laux, a third string backfield man, are the other two former 'Skins with the Eagles.

Virginia Meets North Carolina At Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—Virginia and North Carolina, traditional football rivals since 1892, play the forty-eighth game in their series here tomorrow at Foreman Field with the kickoff at 2 p. m.

The series is tied at 22 wins each and three ties. Carolina is favored to win. The old rivals meet on neutral ground for the first time since 1916. Both schools are thick with V-12 trainees, but Carolina appears to have the edge in service talent, including Hosea (Alabama) Rodgers, the Poole boys from Ole Miss and George (Virginia) Grimes who will be cocaptain of the Tarheels. Against his alma mater, Grimes tossed both touchdown passes for Virginia last year when Carolina won, 20-13.

The Cavaliers will go into the game with less experienced team featuring the "T" formation attack. Only Capt. Seiler, tackle, and Halfback Murray played against the Tarheels last year.

The probable lineups:

Virginia.	Position.	North Carolina.
Cofer	L.E.	B. Poole
Speer	L.T.	Cornogg
Wood	L.G.	Strayhorn
McDonald	Center	McDaniel
Brinkley	R.G.	Jones
Seiler Capt.)	R.T.	Hobges
Broaddus	R.E.	Henry
James	Q.B.	Kosinski
Sackett	H.B.	S. Grimes
Murray	H.B.	Rodgers

Seahawks Are Favored Over Gophers

Minneapolis, Nov. 26 (AP).—Minnesota's Gophers are back on the short end of the dope again for their season's wind-up Saturday against the Nation's No. 2 football team—the Iowa Seahawks.

How good a showing the Gophers will make depends considerably on the condition of two key players—Center Bob Lossie and Righ Half Chuck Avery. Both were injured in the Wisconsin game, and it is certain both will be handicapped tomorrow. Lossie's injuries have responded more slowly, and he may see little service.

The Seahawks will be without two of their top players—Backs Frank Maznicki and Dick Todd; but Coach Don Faurot has a host of reserves and the Iowa City team will suffer less through injuries than will the Gophers.

The probable lineups:

Seahawks.	Position.	Minnesota.
Clements	L.E.	Gagne
Carlson	L.T.	Aldworth
Tobin	L.G.	Langan
Olson	Center	Johnson
Kerasiotis	R.G.	Weber
Kramer	R.T.	Mitchell
Connor	R.E.	Rapko
Smith	Q.B.	Peterson
Blazina	L.H.	Williams
Curran	R.H.	Collison
Mertes	F.B.	Monerief

Trojans Favored To Whip Uclans

Los Angeles, Nov. 26 (AP).—Southern California, still unbeaten by any college eleven in 1943, closes its regular schedule tomorrow against its crosstown rival, UCLA, with the odds-makers favoring the Trojajns at 2 to 5, or even and 13 points.

The Trojans whipped UCLA in the season opener last September, 20 to 0, and although they have been hard hit by calls to the service, they should win decisively again.

They will play the University of Washington in the Pasadena Rose Bowl New Year's Day. Saturday's game should attract about 45,000.

Saddle horses, often ignored in prize lists for local shows, will be among the important features of the card for the Green Meadows Horse Show at 1 p. m. tomorrow at Riggs and Ager rds. near Hyattsville, Md.

Championships will be given in three divisions—saddle horses, hunters and jumpers. Classes are for three-gaited hacks, five-gaited saddle, junior three-gaited hacks, harness, hunter hacks, warm-up jumpers, working hunters, knock-down-and-out, handicap jumpers, ladies' hunters and triple bar. F. John Tollin, jr. of Erie, Pa., and Ray F. Book, formerly of Youngstown, Ohio, will judge.

APPLING

Appling joined the White Sox in 1931 after serving a year in the minors with Atlanta. He led the American League in batting in 1936 and paced the shortstops in assists and chances accepted in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1937. He was second in this season's poll for the most valuable player award in the American League.

Gabe Menendez Re-Signed As Matchmaker for Turner

Gabe Menendez, who made successful matches for Joe Turner for nearly two y ears before donning Army khaki in the spring of 1942, yesterday officially returned to the Turner fistic promotional family in the role of matchmaker, effective immediately.

The youthful Gabe, a transplanted Tampa fight manager, was recently honorably discharged from the Army after 18 months of service and, in returning to the Turner fold, is picking up exactly where he left off before entering service. With Menendez making matches, Promoter Turner enjoyed his most successful two years from a financial standpoint. Menendez' shows, during the summer of 1941, averaged over $6000 weekly at Griffith Stadium. High spot of his matchmaking career was a championship bout between Washington's Phil Furr and Henry Armstrong, which grossed slightly over $20,000.

GABE MENENDEZ

Menendez plans to present his first show Monday, December 6, at Turner's Arena. Although contracts are not as yet signed, he hopes to put in George Parks, local Negro heavyweight, and Lee Oma, hard-hitting Baltimorean.

Coombs of Duke Won't Go to Phils

Durham, N. C., Nov. 26 (AP). Coach Jack Coombs, Duke University baseball coach and former pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, says there's absolutely nothing to a rumor he is going back to the majors.

The rumor was that he would go with the Phillies in some capacity, but, says Coombs: "I've been coaching college baseball for almost 25 years, and I think that my services and my experience should be given to the boy who aspires to become a major league player, rather than to the player who has already developed."

The talk all started, apparently, because Robert Carpenter, Duke alumnus and new president of the Phillies and Coombs were great pals when Carpenter attended Duke.

Wings Drop Player

Detroit, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League today returned Defenseman Gordon Sherritt to their Indianapolis farm club in the American League.

4 Bainbridge Men on Marine Selected Team

Camp Lejeune, N. C., Nov. 26 (AP).—The undefeated and untied Bainbridge, Md., Naval Training Station football team, which gave the Camp Lejeune Marines one of their two defeats, got four positions on the Marines' all-opponent team.

Duke, Southern Conference champions; the North Carolina Preflight club and Jacksonville Navy got two each and Camp Davis one.

Halfback Bill de Correvont, whose passing defeated the Marines; End Red Hickey, who caught the Bainbridge touchdown pass; Guard Len Akin and Tackle Phil Ragazzo were the four Commodores chosen.

Others named were Kuzman, Preflight, tackle; Vannoy, Camp Davis, center; Milner, Duke, guard; Breceda, Jacksonville, end, and Murphy, Duke; Sanzotta, Jacksonville, and Hare, Preflight, backs.

Seahawks Crowd Team Selections

Milwaukee, Nov. 26 (AP) — Iowa Naval Preflight, Purdue and Great Lakes dominate the all-opponent eleven named today by Marquette University gridders.

The selection:

Huber (Camp Grant), Schwartz (Iowa Preflight), ends; Genis, (Purdue) and Kramer, (Iowa Preflight), tackles; Letlow (Great Lakes), Agase (Purdue), guards; Banonis (Iowa Preflight) center; Guepe (Iowa Preflight) quarterback; Sitko (Great Lakes), Todd (Iowa Preflight), halfbacks, and Butkovich (Purdue) fullback.

Devitt Cagers Book 20 Games

Devitt Prep School basketball squad, about 18 strong, will start work for an intensive 20-game schedule on Monday, Coach Len Askin announced yesterday.

While no members of last year's basketball team are available, Askin believes he has fine material in several members of his football team, who played on the Bethesda-Chevy Chase cage squad last year. These include John Ferry, a guard; George Van Wagner, forward; John Slaughter, forward, and Bob Coombs and John Finn.

The schedule opens against Roosevelt on December 13, and other games will be played against Tech, Western, Anacostia (2), Gonzaga (2), Georgetown Prep (2), Central, Fairfax (2), George Washington, Montgomery Blair, Maryland Park, Landon (2), St. Alban's, Mt. St. Joseph's and National Training School.

Boston Blue Wins by Nose At Marlboro

By Walter Haight

Marlboro, Nov. 26.—Carrying top weight of 118 pounds, Mrs. Arthur White's Boston Blue turned in a smashing finish to win a photo decision in the La Plata Purse, featuring the final Friday program. The 6-year-old son of Polydor hung a close defeat on Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Carrius, the favorite in the field of eight. Third money went to Mrs. E. R. Mitchell's Blicky Boy.

The card drew a crowd of 6000 with racing conducted under ideal conditions. Boston Blue, well handled by Jockey Leon Garrett, returned a $12.40 mutuel and was clocked in 1:09 4-5 for the 5½ furlongs.

Apprentice Joe Pannell took Carmus to the front at the break and the public choice drew out. Garrett, however, was saving ground and steadying the ultimate winner in the early stages. Leaving the backstretch, Boston Blue was placed to a drive and he responded by going out and then gradually wearing down the pacemaker.

The daily double paid 26.50 and went to holders of the "2-5" tickets. H. C. McGee's Comedy Player, a $6.70 shot, won the first race and J. E. Simmons' Remolee, paying $7.80, took the second event.

The second best offering of the day went to Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Canto Gallo. The Transmute colt galloped home in front of Deau Foot and Mayfair in the sixth race, a sprint of 6½ furlongs and paid $4.40.

Vendors Lien, one of the most popular thoroughbreds on the smaller tracks, died at Charles Town yesterday. The 7-year-old, owned by E. B. Lee of Leesburg, Va., was shipped to West Virginia track from New England and developed pneumonia en route. Vendors Lien won eight races in a row at Charles Town last summer and followed these successes with victories at Camden and at Akron to make it 10 in a row—his record for the year was 12 wins, 2 seconds, 1 third in 18 trips to the post. Jockey Willie Dufford will resume riding at Charles Town. The stewards allowed Willie Rudert to resume riding after investigating his performance on Queen Minatoka the other day. Ben Bene Dulaney made his annual track visit today with intermittent success. With an array of newspapermen here, many to attend the meeting of the Maryland Racing Writers at George Perry's Marlboro Hotel, it was only fitting that Press Box should win the fourth race—and most of the boys were down on the hunch bet.

Willing Frankie Wills Brushed Off Cash by Subbing for Zivic

By Al Costello

This is the story of a fighter who, by fighting, probably lost money.

Last Thursday night, Fritzie Zivic was scheduled to fight George (Red) Doty of Hartford, a pretty good welterweight, in Akron. Last month, against Jake LaMotta, Fritzie suffered a badly cut eye. The Ohio State Boxing Commission refused to permit the Pittsburgh Phlailer to fight.

FRANKIE WILLS

Frankie Wills, District welterweight champ, was called upon to substitute. Frankie not only substituted but, in a manner unbecoming a sub, won a decision from Doty.

Zivic was advertised to appear and, although prohibited from donning the gloves, stepped into the ring as referee.

Match Sought Here

Now it is not exactly a secret that Promoter Goldie Ahearn has been trying to match Wills and Zivic for a match at Uline Arena some time early in January.

But what happened?

After Zivic, as referee, saw Wills in action he immediately notified Ahearn he was not too keen to meet Wills under any conditions.

So Wills, by acting as a substitute for the talented Zivic, received a mere $750 purse when he might have, by refusing to act as a sub, remained in the background until he got into the ring here with Fritzie for 25 per cent of a gate which might have amounted to as much as $10,000.

The Date Is Monday

Wills has a date here Monday night with Ernest (Cat) Robinson, a talented New York Negro, in the feature bout of Promoter Ahearn's Uline Arena card which shapes up as the best all-around presentation of the year, for the supporting cast is excellent.

In the eight-round semifinal, Billy Banks, local Negro lightweight, takes on the sensational Vic Creelman, a New York sailor who has 28 straight pro-victories to his credit, including three here, two by kayoes. In an eight-rounder, Sailor Eddie White, a bruising heavyweight, with four straight kayoes here to his credit, mixes with "Li'l Abner" Powell, a Negro M. P. from Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

District War Fund Climbing Toward Its $4,800,000 Goal

Climbing steadily toward its $4,800,000 goal, the Community War Fund yesterday reached 92.47 per cent of the sum as a post-campaign city-wide drive continued by seven divisions determined to reach every prospective giver.

The new total represents a $35,977 increase over the amount collected when the drive officially closed on November 19.

The four principal divisions are still confident that contributions from persons out of town during the campaign and those who feel they ought to give more will shortly put the fund over the top.

Continuing donations may be mailed to 1101 M st. nw.

Visa Authorized, He'll Go to Cuba, De Marigny Says

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 26 (AP).—Alfred de Marigny, acquitted of a charge of murdering Sir Harry Oakes but told to get out of the Bahamas, said tonight he will go to Cuba "as soon as I can."

He received a message from Undersecretary of State Commandante Miranda today, he reported, authorizing a Cuban passport visa.

Of Nancy, 19, Sir Harry's eldest daughter, whom he married, he said:

"She will follow me wherever I go, even to the South Pole."

De Marigny's friend and principal defense witness, the Marquis Georges de Visdelou-Guimbeau, has obtained a Haitian visa and it is apparent they will be separated, as de Visdelou still plans to go to Haiti.

Yule Greetings

Record Mob Of Shoppers Jams Stores

By Helene Champlain

The season of mistletoe, wreaths and Christmas shopping lists is undeniably upon us, and claustrophobia sufferers had best steer clear of downtown Washington for the next four weeks.

Postoffice officials have been pleading for pre-December 1 mailing, and Christmas shopping began earlier than ever this year, shops being jammed with the sort of buying crowds that never used to congregate until the middle of December.

"And there are still 25 shopping days left till Christmas," wailed one harassed saleslady, who doubted that the perenially late buyers would find anything left on the counters in a few weeks.

Christmas gift shopping is heavier, as well as earlier, this season, sales persons agreed, indicating that war-increased salaries may well be the reason. Combined with manpower shortages, it makes present-hunting a more grueling experience than ever. The stores have found a partial solution in teen-age employes, while one department firm at least has instituted central sales desks to which customers may bring their choices.

A counter-to-counter canvass of downtown stores yesterday indicated that gift-type articles are currently plentiful, despite shortages of many materials, but selections are narrower. Only fountain pens, once the accepted gift for all ages and relations, were markedly scarce.

Army Families Soon to Get Fatter Checks

Scheduled in time for Christmas, Army checks covering increases in dependency benefits for soldiers' wives with children, provided for by a recent congressional amendment, will be mailed early in December.

The Office of Dependency Benefits reported yesterday that in only 15 days, 454,738 accounts had been converted while other changed family allowances are still being computed.

Family allowances for Class B-1 dependents, which includes parents, brothers and sisters who rely on the soldier for their chief support, and for Class B dependents, who are parents, brothers and sisters substantially dependent upon the soldier, must be individually adjudged to determine the degree of dependency.

These are being processed now, as are family allowance accounts to divorced wives to whom alimony is payable.

"Whether or not it is a white Christmas, it will be a secure one for soldiers' children," Brig. Gen. H. N. Gilbert, ODB director, said.

New Coal Prices In District Based On Long-Ton Rule

Discrepancies between the new coal prices at the mines and those allowed in Washington are due to the fact that the coal at the mines is measured in short tons, or 2000 pounds each and in Washington, at the long, or gross ton, of 2240 pounds each.

Thus the price boost of 70 cents a ton for a short, or net ton, at the mine is applied to a 2000-pound measure.

In other words, when a consumer here buys a ton of coal, he automatically gets the 2240-pound measure, whereas when he buys it elsewhere he gets only 2000 pounds.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal employes write today's column.

DESK OFFICE TINTYPES

The coffee barfly is the social type. "Let's match for this one," is his way of beginning any conversation and out they go to the nearest coffee bar to carry on their talk. But the barfly rarely finishes a conference at the bar. If a pretty girl goes by he'll turn his head like a compass needle to the north star. As likely as not he'll say, "Wait a bit, Joe, I see someone I know"—then he'll disappear.

But the barfly can be counted on to be a pretty good guy, a considerate type. He opens the big doors for the little girls and old ladies and pulls wires to get a transfer for the little gal across the hall who is being abused by her boss. He has a Boy Scout complex and he must do a good turn each day. He knows everybody and everything—how to get nylon stockings and steak, and cranberry sauce in cans. He'll never say no even if he does not know the answer.. The young girls flatter him to the teeth and tell him how cunning he looks in his new winter uniform.

THE CONFERENCE TYPE makes as much ado about getting to the conference as the white rabbit that was late for the Duchess' party. He's the one who always interrupts with: "Now gentlemen, we should hold another conference on the detail's of captain's so-and-so's proposal so we can tie up the loose ends and pick the bugs out of it. We must organize this project properly and get the ball rolling . . ." and so on. Then the morrow there's another conference, and the morrow, and the morrow, ad infinitum.

THE TRAVEL TYPE is happy if he feels the ground receding under him. If you see an officer impressively carrying a large genuine leather brief case that's the travel kind all right. If he's entering the building with his bag, he's just in from a jaunt, and if he's leaving with genuine leather briefcase under his arm, he's headed for a train or plane. At the latter stage his secretary is slumped in her chair her breath coming in short gasps of relief.

The beginning of the trip is the big pain. First, he wants to go to Chicago, arriving on the second; from there to Sacramento on the third; to Detroit for the fourth; Dallas on the sixth; from there to Buffalo on the seventh, and back to Washington. Then after his secretary has phoned for the reservations, using her very best phone voice and tact in order to get what he wants, the travel officer decides to fly to Minneapolis and cancels the Buffalo trip because he must catch a convention in Boston on the ninth. His secretary has made a start so to cheer him up she tells him she has his space to Chicago, a lower. He interrupts: he demands a roomette.

Then every hour for the next two days, starting with an hour after the secretary gets the itinerary, the officer is sure to ask: "Are my reservations in yet? Where are my orders? Am I going on this trip or not?. Call 'em up right away, you've got to keep after those guys." Then the reservations are all made and the officer decides he will go to Atlanta and fly to Boston from there. About that time his secretary wishes he'd commit a crime—a big crime—so he could be kept in Atlanta, in the Federal Penitentiary.

THE DESK OFFICER sits all day, is married, and has a nice hot supper waiting for him when he gets home. He has about 10 buzzers on his desk and his idea of progress is to keep buzzing until 10 stenogs are on the move working solely for him. The younger officers of this type smoke cigars and put their feet on the desks. If they smell a higher-ranking officer coming they swivel their dogs to the floor in double-quick time. (This gives them exercise.)

The obsession of the desk officer is indorsements, in any form—memo, wrapper, kimona, or what have you. He delights to receive one which has been indorsed to death about 11 times and on which no action has been taken. He begins to sweat, so he dictates a further indorsement, demanding action and plenty of it. Then a copy goes into his tickler file. Oh yes, the tickler file. To each new secretary (this happens every eight weeks) the desk officer takes great pride in explaining how his tickler file works, how it's set up, etc. (Everyone else calls them follow-up files.) A typical characteristic is the display of his favorite motto, all unconscious that it is also his besetting weakness. The motto usually is THINK in large black letters on his desk.

LEGAL BOARD KILLED

The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday killed the House-approved bill which would have continued the Board of Legal Examiners. The vote was 5 to 4. Chairman Downey didn't vote. Voting for the bill were Senators Mead, McKellar, George, and Burton. This settles the controversy and now the Civil Service Commission can go forward with plans to completely take over the board. If it doesn't the way will be clear for the Harvard Boys to again dominate the selection of attorneys for Uncle Sam. . . . Federal Diary of the Air, tomorrow at 4:35, WRC.

Installation Planned

The Community Church Guild will install officers Wednesday afternoon at a meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Comly B. Richie of 56-F Crescent road. An apron sale will be held December 4 and the profits will be given to the church building fund. The guild has previously turned over $100 towards this fund.

D. C. Liquor Ration Idea Called Feeler

Liquor rationing as proposed by the local liquor retailers association in a communication to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board Monday was a trial balloon and not a program with complete support from the association's membership of 250, it was learned yesterday.

Members of the executive committee held a three-hour closed session with the three-member ABC board yesterday and said the plan had been put forward as a basis for discussion and that their organization was not giving the "one bottle per customer plan" full backing.

Varied Types of Dealers

Board Chairman Thomas E. Lodge pointed out that the retail group represented many types of storees—neighborhood, downtown, combination grocery and liquor establishments—all of which have different interests.

Meanwhile, it is understood, retailers have been hearing much complaint from customers on the proposal which would require a person to secure a special ABC permit if buying more than one bottle or if not a resident holding a Washington OPA ration book.

Yesterday's closed session was for purposes of discussing the plan set forth Monday and the general situation, according to Lodge, and no conclusions were reached.

Rationing Discussed

Lodge said the matter of local distribution was still open to suggestion from the public and liquor dealers and handlers of all classes.

He said it had not yet been determined whether or not the commissioners could order rationing without first securing additional legislation, but that the problem was discussed yesterday.

Harry Wechsler, president of the local retailers unit, who left the session early, said he thought a plan would be worked out which would be agreeable to all. He said he saw Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, chairman of the Senate subcommittee investigating liquor, and was told he would be called to appear before hearings.

Local Market Criticized

Lodge yesterday received a telephone call from the Senator asking that the ABC board appear, and said it would depend on who was invited, who would appear. Senator Van Nuys had formerly said invitations would not be issued, but tha persons concerned would be expected to appear. He last week called the liquor marketing situation here one of the worst in the country.

Representing liquor dealers at yesterday's meeting were Wechsler, Max L. Dorfman, Benjamin Moss and Bernard C. Oser, all officers of the local association.

Morris Stearman of the Sherman Avenue Liquor Store and P. C. Kolinski, attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, sat in on the meeting but took no part in discussions.

A further meeting of the retail association's executive committee on the local shortage will be held early next week.

Monday morning, first of the local liquor dealers cited to show cause why his license should not be canceled or revoked in connection with practices perpetrating the local shortage will be heard before the ABC board at 9:30 a. m. Three other dealers will shortly be cited, Lodge said last night.

City News In Brief

George Besley, owner of the Sunoco gas station at 2305 Pennsylvania ave. se., has reported to police that the station was entered sometime early yesterday and gasoline ration coupons, worth about 2800 gallons, and $100 in cash were taken.

A second report of a theft was made by Maurice Gendleman, owner of Gendleman's Resturant at 421 11th st. nw., who told police that sometime between November 14 and Thanksgiving Day a quantity of silverware valued at $300 was taken from the restaurant.

Naval Group Praised

Comdr. Howard T. Orville, chief of the Aerological Division of Naval Operations, paid high tribute yesterday to the men working under him for their share in American victories.

Speaking at a luncheon of the Reciprocity Club at the Mayflower, Orville said weather predictions for the invasions of North Africa, Sicily and Guadalcanal had been almost perfect.

5 Seats for Servicemen

Five as yet unknown music-minded servicemen will hear the first of the 15-30 National Symphony Concert series from Mrs. Roosevelt's box in Constitution Hall tonight. Unable to attend herself, the President's wife donated her tickets to Recreation Services, Inc., and applications may be made at the "Ticket Hut" in Post Square, 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

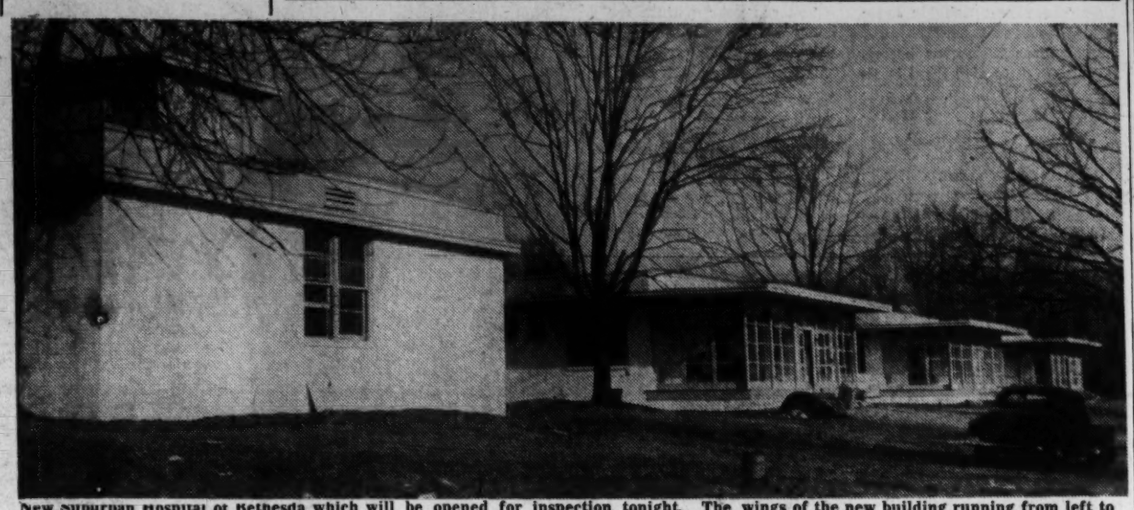

James Melton, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will be soloist. Tickets are on sale at Kitt's Music Store, 1330 G st. nw.

New Hospital at Bethesda To Admit District Residents

Patients from Washington will be admitted to the new Suburban hospital at Bethesda, which opens officially for nonsurgical cases Wednesday, J. Dewey Lutes, hospital superintendent, announced last night.

"There are no geographical boundaries for persons who want to enter the hospital," Lutes declared, explaining that it is a "voluntary and nongovernmental" institute.

Hundreds are expected to attend the "open house" at the hospital tonight from 8 p. m. until 11:30 p. m., and tomorrow from 2 p. m. until 6 p. m. Built with Federal funds granted under the Lanham Act the building is estimated to have cost approximately $750,000. This amount includes furnishings. It will accommodate 100 to 120 patients. As soon as necessary equipment arrives surgical cases will be cared for.

A contract has been signed with Group Hospitalization, Inc., in Washington for full benefits for members. The Associated Hospital Service of Baltimore has signed a similar agreement, it was learned.

Completion of the Suburban Hospital makes Bethesda one of the foremost medical centers in the country. In the community are the National Health Institute, the National Cancer Institute and the Naval Medical Center.

Rates for the hospital are as follows: Private room with lavatory, $8.50 a day; other private rooms, $7 a day; for accommodations in two-bed rooms, $6 a day; for four-bed ward, $5; children's ward, $5, and basinette in nursery, $2.

Among the guests who have accepted invitations to attend tonight's opening are:

Senator George Radcliffe, Rear Admiral C. W. O. Bunker, commanding officer of the National Naval Medical Center; William Reynolds, commissioner of Public Buildings; Gen. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of FWA; Henry J. Sullivan, assistant regional director of FWA; Bair Snyder, assistant administrator of FWA; Dr. James W. Mountin, assistant surgeon general of U. S. Oil Firm, OPA Appeal Verdict Of Region Unit

Both the District Office of Price Administration and L. P. Steuart & Bros., Inc., fuel oil dealers, yesterday filed appeals with the National OPA Hearing Administrator against a recent order which absolved the company on two counts of violating the rationing regulations and found it guilty on one count.

John L. Laskey, counsel for the OPA, said the agency's appeal claims the order, as handed down by OPA Commissioner Clifford R. Snyder of the regional office in New York, as being "incomplete" and that the company was guilty of making deliveries to customers without first obtaining ration coupons and that it had not kept proper records of its coupons as provided for under the regulations.

Renah F. Camalier, attorney for the company, filed an appeal which claims the agency usurped the rights of the courts in making its decision and that the order was unconstitutional.

The order forbids the firm to accept any new customers which it did not have between July of 1942 and July of 1943. This was done on the findings of the OPA that the Steuart company had received large quantities of oil from the Petrol Corp. in Philadelphia without a proper transfer of coupons.

Two Brothers Reunited In Pacific

A lonely island in the Southwest Pacific provided the scene for "the thrill in a lifetime" for two Washington brothers—a sailor and a soldier—who met by chance after not seeing each other for more than a year.

The story was told yesterday by the boys' mother, Mrs. John E. Walter, of 2911 N st. se., who displayed a snapshot of the brothers taken amidst tropical vegetation.

The boys are William and Charles (Chuck) Hough. "William joined the National Guard here in October, 1940, and sailed into the Pacific in May, 1940. Chuck enlisted in the Navy in January, 1942, and sailed the following December.

Chuck was on radio watch when word was received that an Army detachment had moved in about 3 miles from Chuck's base. The identification of the detachment was that of his brother's company.

The brothers enjoyed several weeks together and are looking forward to their next meeting in Washington, Mrs. Walter said. Chuck is a second class petty officer, Bill a corporal.

Explorer Tells Of Ancient Finds In Ruins of Mexico

Recounting experiences among the great stone faces, priceless treasure troves of jade and amazing public and religious edifices left behind by a vanished pre-Columbian civilization, Dr. Matthew W. Stirling, addressed the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall last night on the five expeditions he has led to Mexico's "far south."

The expeditions, cosponsored by the National Geographic Society and the Smithsonian Institution, have a long list of "firsts" to their credit—among them a stone bearing the oldest date ever found in the American Hemisphere; the La Venta Head, one of five colossal Buddha-like heads found at La Venta, Mexico; and ax-heads and artistic objects carved of jade.

Drug Firms Get 'Show Cause' Price Ruling

Thirteen of the largest drug companies of the Nation yesterday obtained a court ruling from Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court ordering the Office of Price Administration to show cause by Monday why the agency should not be prevented from setting a price ceiling on vitamin products.

The companies filed the injunction suit earlier in the day, stating the OPA has no right to set the ceiling since the price of packaged vitamins has not threatened to rise, but on the contrary has tended to decline during the last year.

The suit states the drug firms will suffer an unlawful curtailment of profits if OPA fixes ceilings, and will suffer an irreparable loss by being forced to change the price labels on the packages.

The companies are the Abbott Laboratories of Chicago, Eli Lilly & Co. of Indianapolis, Winthrop Chemical Co. of New York, International Vitamins Corp. of New York, Carroll Dunham Smith Pharmacal Co. of Orange, N. J., Oxford Products Co. of Cleveland, Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Vitamins Plus Division, Vick Chemical Co. of New York, United Drug, Inc., of Boston, E. R. Squibb & Sons of New York, William H. Rorer, Inc., of Philadelphia; Parke, Davis & Co. of Detroit, and Standard Brands, Inc., of New York.

Two Firemen Overcome, Market Gutted

Two firemen were overcome by smoke and two others received lacerations yesterday when a two-alarm fire destroyed the Jenifer Market at 5317 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Dense smoke and a single narrow cellar stairway prevented firefighters from reaching the seat of the fire and they were forced to pump tons of water down the stairway. The cellar was flooded to a depth of 5 feet.

Large supplies of foodstuffs stored in the basement were destroyed. Damage estimates ranged upward to $50,000.

Traffic on Wisconsin ave., one of the city's main rush-hour arteries, was detoured by both District and Montgomery County police on either side of the District line. Streetcars were halted for 45 minutes before hose elevators could be rigged up and a shuttle system with buses organized.

Believed to have originated in an oil stove, the flames created such intense heat that firemen were forced to smash large plate glass windows at the front of the store.

Capt. William Webb, No. 31 Engine Co., and Pvt. Carl Sugges, No. 28 Engine, both were overcome by smoke. They received first aid on the scene and continued the fight. Two other firemen were given emergency treatment for cuts.

Smoke and water also damaged the basement of the Washington Veterinary Hospital which adjoins at 5313.

Treasury Agents Arrest Two On Drug Charge

Nelson S. Degore, 32, 1246 9th st nw., and William W. Brown, 29, of 1402 6th st. nw., both Negroes, were charged with violating the Harrison Narcotics Act yesterday following raids on their homes by Treasury agents.

LeRoy W. Morrison, agent in charge of the Washington field office, said no narcotics were found, but that a quantity of alleged dope-administering paraphernalia was seized.

The suspects will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning. They were held under $2000 bail.

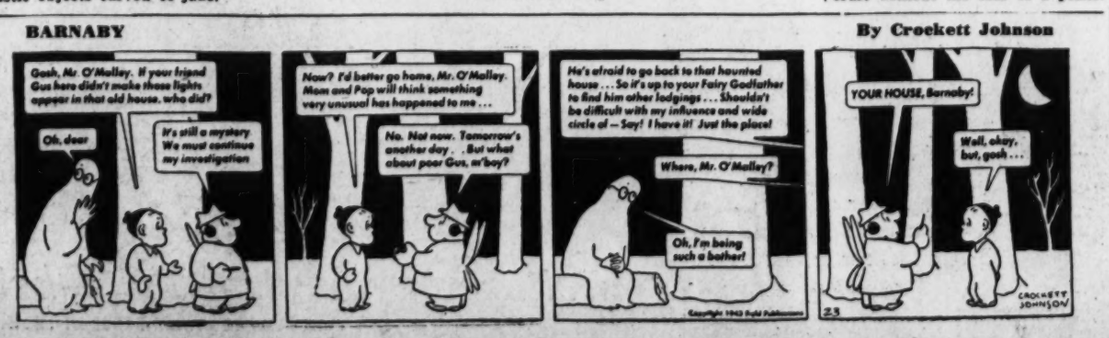

Decorations Won By 2 U. S. Airmen Presented Here

Decorations won by two Army Air Corps officers, Brig. Gen. Howard K. Ramey and Maj. William G. Benn, were presented at retreat ceremonies yesterday at Bolling Field to members of their families.

The Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal and the Award of the Legion of Merit were received by Mrs. H. K. Ramey of 2000 16th st. nw. for her husband, who has been missing in action since his airplane failed to return from a combat mission on March 26, 1943. The commanding general of the Fifth Bomber Command, General Ramey frequently accompanied his crews on operations and under his direction a 22-ship enemy convoy was annihilated in the Bismarck Sea.

Mrs. Dorothy C. Benn, a Civil Service employe with the Army War College, was presented the Distinguished Service Medal and the Air Medal for her husband, who also is missing and who was decorated for introducing low-altitude bombing and proving it practicable. During the period from September 19 to November 18, 1942, Major Benn led his combat crews on raids that destroyed or severely damaged 33 Japanese vessels and destroyed 18 enemy aircraft without the loss of a plane.

Dr. Dun Weighs Offer Of Bishopric

By Robert Tate Allen

Because he feels that there is "no greater work than preparing men for the ministry," the Very Rev. Angus Dun, dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, Mass., will defer decision on his acceptance of the post of new Bishop of the Washington Diocese.

He indicated this as he arrived yesterday at the College of Preachers, Cathedral Close, for a weekend visit, and to be officially notified of his election last Tuesday.

Dr. Dun said the war already has reduced his seminary's enrollment by 50 per cent, deploring the fact that "most able-bodied men are now in secular occupations."

"The ministry has not had its share of the ablest men," he said.

He said he viewed the task of the Bishop of Washington as a four-fold responsibility.

It affords a great opportunity for a prelate to work with parish ministers, he said, and "to deepen and lift the level of the whole ministry of the church in this area."

"It offers a chance for the Cathedral to be a leaven in the life of the Episcopal Church and beyond," he went on in speaking of the "great missionary opportunities" in the Nation's Capital.

Discussing proposed unity between the Presbyterian (Northern) and Episcopal bodies, Dr. Dun said that he has "long been convinced that the division in the church is not something we can accept." He called the failure of religious forces to unite "a public scandal."

The committee which informed the dean of the high honor bestowed upon him consisted of Justice Owen J. Roberts, Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan and Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church.

Dr. Dun said he would not preach at the Cathedral tomorrow as he wanted to be "an inconspicuous member of the congregation."

Bishop-Elect, Wife Often Ride Bicycles

By Emily Towe

The Very Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop-elect of Washington who reflects a quiet strength and faith in guidance by God, said in an interview here yesterday that "Washington may be amused some day at a bishop and his wife bicycling down the avenue."

Mr. Dun, 51, ruddy-faced descendant of Scotch forbears who is visiting the diocese which awaits his decision on acceptance of the bishopric, spoke with fervor of training ministers at his Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., of which he is dean.

Then he revealed a genial side of his personality as he told of pedaling with his wife through his tradition-bound New England town as neighbors' laughs resounded along the street.

Course Was Changed

The clergyman planned to become a physician when he started to Yale University. A frail child, he had spent much of his boyhood with doctors and nurses and as a result admired them with a boyish hero worship.

But the young college student, who had attended Sunday school only a few times in his home town of Albany, N. Y., came under a new influence—the gripping power of Christianity—that changed his ambitions and his entire life.

He Teaches Ministers

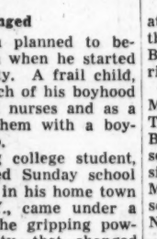

After his graduation in 1917 from the school that he now heads, he remained there as a philosophy teacher and through the succeeding years poured his life into training ministers at the small, yet religiously powerful school. From its classrooms have gone forth bishops and other clergymen to all parts of the world.

Dr. Dun disclosed an antipathy toward "advertising one's piety" when asked if prayer would be the deciding factor as to whether or not he would accept the Washington bishopric.

Mrs. Dun is accompanying him on the visit here. They have two sons, Alan, who is an Army medical student at Harvard University, and Angus Dun, jr., an assistant minister at Christ Church in Cambridge.

Subsequently he commanded an aircraft carrier until nine months ago when he was promoted to rear admiral, after which he was assigned to Pacific war zone.

Union Seeks To Suspend Four Officers

By Ed Mitchell

Rank and file members of the Building Laborers' Union Local 74 in a meeting at 320 F st. sw. last night agreed to seek legal steps which would prevent four men, under investigation with Larry Kelly, suspended union official, from continuing in the union.

Meanwhile, at a meeting of the Laborers' District Council, held simultaneously at union headquarters, 523 New Jersey ave. nw., an election of a successor to Kelly was set for December 7.

John L. Sullivan, cochairman of the rank and file group, returned from the council meeting and told his faction that Joseph V. Moreschi, union president, had turned temporary chairmanship of the council over to Joseph Speed.

This report could not be confirmed by reporters at the council meeting, however.

Speed is one of the four under investigation by the council with Kelly and charged by them with laxity in handling union funds. The other three officials are George Morgan, G. E. Plummer and E. H. Hamilton.

Moreschi announced to the union Tuesday night that Kelly had been expelled but that the other four would remain pending their future behavior.

Reporters were refused admission to both the council and rank and file meetings.

Police were called to Turner's Arena Tuesday night when Moreschi announced the decisions in the cases of Kelly and the four others, so three policemen and a lieutenant from the First Precinct stood guard outside the council meeting last night. There were no police at the rank and file meeting.

Kelly is still unheard of since his disappearance during investigation by the grand jury in which he had been summoned as a witness some time ago.

Housing Laborers Quit

Three hundred members of the International Hod Carriers Builders and Common Laborers Union of America, Local 74, employed on a housing project at Seminary Heights, Va., walked off the job at 1 p. m. yesterday in disagreement with the contractor, the Thompson-Starrett Co., members of the union's rank and file faction said last night.

Cause of the strike, the union members said, was refusal of the contractor to allow the workers to check tools in and out on company time. Another question, it was said, was failure of the contractor to provide sheds for the convenience of workmen changing clothes.

Officials of the contracting firm could not be reached for comment last night.

Civic Group Of District Elects Officers

The Federation of Civic Associations, at its meeting last night in the boardroom at the District Building, reelected Dr. E. F. Harris president for the ensuing year.

Other officers reelected included Mrs. Velma Williams and Guy U. Tinner, vice presidents; Mrs. Edith B. Thomas and Mrs. Martha Simpson, recording secretary and assistant; Mrs. Edna West Payton and Malcolm Daniels, corresponding secretary and assistant; W. D. Nixon, treasurer.

An intensive study of the housing situation and problems of juvenile delinquency was ordered in cooperation with existing agencies seeking solution of health and crime situations growing out of the present inadequate housing for Negroes in the District.

An appropriation of $25 to aid the work of an interracial commission working under the District Commissioners was made, following an explanation of the work of this body by Dr. C. Herbert Marshall.

Organization of victory garden projects for 1944 was undertaken, following an address by J. Morton Franklin of the Civilian Defense Administration.

Make It Do

Background for Matching Wits With Upholsterers, Decorators

The shortage of new furniture has forced women to choose between a sparsely furnished living room and use of dilapidated pieces gleaned from secondhand stores and attics. Some of these eyesores may be rescued from their doldrums by restyling, which includes reupholstery and rebuilding.

This procedure has a double advantage. The prewar construction is retained (the metal springs are saved) and the finished chair or sofa may be made to harmonize with other furnishings in the room. Whether you do this in your home or send it to an upholsterer, it's best to know something of the steps in the process.

Interlacing strips of webbing are tacked to the frame to serve as a foundation. The springs are attached to this and tied together at the tops to keep them from shifting. The springs are covered with a heavy fabric, a layer of padding or stuffing placed over this. A muslin cover is tacked over this padding to ease the strain upon the upholstery fabric

The inside story of a chair is told pictorially here. The fabric and padding have been torn away, leaving the springs exposed.

Three types of upholstery patterns are shown above—varying stripes, textured design, and large pattern. Remember that strength lies on the wrong side of these materials

Obviously, reupholstering is a laborious process. Therefore, the fabric must be worth that expenditure in time and money. Choose a firm, strong fabric—one which won't give way when pulled and stretched. Remember that strength is built into the wrong side of the fabric. The right side may appear fragile, but if the cloth is good, the back side will be durable.

Since the material you put on that chair will stay for several years, select a piece that will not soil readily. However, don't be too practical—such as by choosing a characterless pattern that will disappoint you in a few months.

Consider the lines of the furniture in selection of color and design. Large patterns that must be centered will waste material. These large patterns, however, associate easily with bulky modern pieces, while they won't blend with "slight" pieces.

Use of tufting will also influence your choice. Highlights and shadows created by these recesses make their own pattern—one which will clash with a bold design.

The Lesser Pattons

Now would be a good time it seems for all of us who are professing democrats and exponents of the ideal of reason rather than force to examine our own lives for evidence of Pattonania.

Ironically enough, many of us who are about to burst blood vessels in indignation over General Patton's fistic attack on a private in a hospital are smaller Pattons in our relations with our fellow beings—and even lack the grace and guts to make apology.

Without condoning General Patton's unfortunate outburst of nerves, it might be pointed out that a witch burning of him will serve no good end so long as it does not bring us up short with the question, "What does this mean to me as an American?"

It should mean that we should see in it something larger than the incident itself: the slow but dogged and inevitable assertion of the common man's dignity—yes, even among the warriors, where the martinet, the bulldozer, the be-medalled show-off, the "cusserout," and the "old line" disciplinarian have been gradually giving way to the poised, hardworking executive, the inconspicious strategist, and the self-controlled leader of men.

It should mean that we should heed this handwriting on the wall in all our social relationships whether we be Army and Navy officers, Government officials, members of Congress, heads of industries, office executives, teachers, parents, citizens, anything in fact, but hermits in isolated caves.

It should mean that as mothers we should not get too indignant over General Patton's archaic methods of discipline unless we ourselves are free from hysterical and emotional methods of dealing with our own children; that as members of Congress we should hesitate to denounce him if we have been guilty ourselves of verbally lambasting and browbeating free Americans when they were witness at our committee hearings; that as executives in Government or in industry we should have the consistency to keep silent if we have ever made those under us the victims of our temper tantrums, our moods, our nerves or our indigestion; that as human beings of any kind we should take this occasion to ask ourselves how much control of our own war nerves we are exercising in dealing with our associates under the present strain of living.

It should mean that we would have an end of those who glory in their "nerves," temperament and temper, and regard themselves as highstrung prima donnas of fate; who boast "I'm just that way," about their emotional ill health or immaturity; who stage scenes little short of rug-chewing, yet verbally excoriate Hitler; who refuse to make the effort through medical aid, psychiatry or their own self-discipline to fit themselves to live in families, work in offices, participate in organizations, lead groups, and function in the increasingly cooperative society toward which man (yes and woman!) is headed.

It should mean that we should recognize and accept the findings of science in regard to the human mind and personality, that we pay greater attention to mental sickness both in ourselves and in others than we have in the past, and that in the handling of people we cease to cling to methods outmoded both politically and scientifically.

It should mean that we as Americans should rejoice that we live in a democracy where the rights of the "private," both in military and civilian life, are protected; where the process of democracy in man's human as well as his political relationships is steadily enlarging itself and coming closer home to all of us; and where we have the privilege, in all the aspects of our daily living, of hastening that process.

Netherlands Naval Hero Entertained at Embassy

Mme. Loudon, Wife of Envoy, Gives Reception Honoring Countryman, Capt. J. de Meester

By Peggy Preston

The arrival in Washington of yet another United Nations warrior was the occasion for a colorful gathering yesterday afternoon at the Netherlands Embassy.

Capturing the lion's share of attention at the 5:30 to 7 fete was honor guest, Capt. J. de Meester, late of the Dutch East Indies and hero of a naval battle there during the initial stage of the Japanese invasion. Since his arrival here was largely unheralded, the reception was a hastily planned affair. It proved nonetheless to be a gala one, attended by ranking representatives from official and diplomatic naval circles, and a sprinkling of civilian guests.

In the absence of the Ambassador, Mme. Loudon headed the small receiving line at the entrance to the drawing room. Standing with her was the beribboned captain, the Naval Attache at the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Ranneft.

Captain de Meester, who is in town for a brief stay only, will be off in a few days for London, his new station.

By his own admission he goes to his newest post with a mingling of emotions; "London will bring me closer to my family who are in Holland," he explains. "I hear from them, yes . . . but only the 25 words allowed through Red Cross channels. In London I can know that in mileage, at least, we are not so far apart."

Is Reluctant to Leave His Ship

But on the other side of the ledger there is the typical Navy man's reluctance to forsake his ship. In his case it is the famous Tromp, a cruiser he has commanded and brought safely to port throughout the South Pacific campaign.

"I was loathe to leave her," he says fondly, and adds philosophically, "Perhaps I'll find another one in London."

From members of the Netherlands naval staffs, practically all of whom were in attendance yesterday, came stories of high praise concerning the visiting captain. The one most often mentioned had to do with his record as skipper of the Tromp during the Battle of Bali. The Tromp sustained 20 hits in the course of the day. Despite the ship-battered condition, the captain brought it safely home, a feat that preserved a precious vessel for the Netherlands Navy and kept intact a valuable crew as well.

Old Friends on Hand To Greet Him

On hand yesterday to greet Captain de Meester was an American cohort, who had charge of repairing the Tromp in Australia following that battle. He was Capt. K. P. Wample who was one of the many officers at the reception who had seen action in the South Pacific.

Among others who reminisced with the honor guest was Capt. H. B. Binford, U. S. Navy, not long returned from Australia; Comdr. J. Blaauboer and Lieut. Comdr. G Koudijs, naval attaches at the Netherlands Embassy, and many members of the Netherlands Naval Mission.

Absent from the gathering was Mrs. Russell Wilson, the former Coby Ranneft, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mme. Ranneft.

"She has a job," her mother replied in answer to queries. "A six-day-a-week office job with one of the war agencies, and she is taking it very seriously." With her Navy husband off at sea, this bride of a year finds time-absorbing war work the best anecdote for loneliness, according to Mrs. Ranneft.

Adm. Davison Is Honored At Dinner

Among the guests present were Assistant Secretary of the Navy A. L. Gates, Vice Admiral John S. McCain, Rear Admiral F. D. Wagner, Rear Admiral de Witt C. Ramsey, Rear Admiral L. B. Richardson, Rear Admiral E. M. Pace and Brig. Gen. L. E. Woods.

Admiral Davison was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1916 and qualified in aviation at Pensacola in 1918. He has had a wide variety of sea duty, including duty on the carriers Langley and Lexington. Before coming to Washington in 1941 he was aide to the Commander of the Aircraft Atlantic Fleet.

Gen., Mrs. Adams Entertain Guest From Front Royal

Mrs. Henry S. Wagner, widow of Colonel Wagner, who came up from her home in Front Royal, Va., for the Thanksgiving holidays, returned yesterday, after being the house guest for three days of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams.

General and Mrs. Adams, who entertained at a small Thanksgiving dinner on Thursday, had among their other guests for the event their brother and sister-in-law Maj. and Mrs. William Yeates.

Mrs. Emory S. Adams, jr., daughter-in-law of General and Mrs. Adams, who has been visiting them for the past ten months, will leave today for the West Coast, where she will be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Churchill in Portland, Oreg., over the Christmas holidays. While in Washington Mrs. Adams, jr., has been with the British Purchasing Commission.

Farewell Party Given by Attache Of Dutch Embassy

Along with the cocktail party at the Netherlands Embassy yesterday afternoon, a member of the Embassy staff was also entertaining. Dr. H. Reimens, Commercial Secretary of the embassy, and Mme. Reimens, were saying goodby to their friends here at a pleasant fete held in their apartment at Hotel 2400. The guests, numbering more than 100, included a group from the Diplomatic Corps and some from official and resident society.

Dr. Reimens has been appointed Financial Attache with offices in New York. He has already taken over the desk there and came back yesterday for the party. Mme. Reimens will join her husband in New York on December 7.

Library Worker To Review Books For Yule Gifts

For the benefit of United China Relief, the Zonta Club of Washington will present, through one of its members, Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger, a very interesting and timely book review—"Good Books for Christmas Gifts," tonight at 8 o'clock at Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Steinbarger, who is consultant in adult education at the Public Library, will review some new books which would make good Christmas gifts. She has the ability to present the characters and just enough of the highlights in a way that makes you want to get the book and read all of it.

There will also be a group of songs by Florence Sindell and organ selections by Nancy Poore Tufts. The public is welcome to attend, and a door collection of 50 cents per person will be contributed to United China Relief. The Zonta Club of Washington has made United China Relief its special benefit project this year, and to date $300 has been raised and forwarded to help Chinese women and children.

Under their leadership Norwegian and Yugoslav relief committees are taking an active part in preparations for the 12-nation holiday money-raising fete

'Under Cover' to Be Subject of Talk

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will review the much discussed book "Under Cover" at her weekly lecture at Sulgrave Club next Monday morning, at 11 o'clock. Personalities in the news, and some of the political highlights of the past week, will be commented on by Mrs. Howard.

Yesterday she spoke to the students at St. Catherine's School in Richmond, Va., and today she will address a community group at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in Frederick, Md. While there she will be the guest of Mrs. Richard Ross who will give a luncheon following the lecture.

Mid-Week Fete For Officers Held at Club

Another successful officers' midweek dance was chalked up last evening when Mrs. French Myers and members of the committee held their Thanksgiving party at Sulgrave Club.

Miss Jane Cain, daughter of Col. Benjamin Cain, USA, and Mrs. Cain of Warrenton, Va., was hostess at a small dinner preceding the dance. And Mrs. Frederick Osborn of New York gave a dinner in honor of her daughter, Virginia, a student at Vassar, who is spending her holiday in the Capital.

There were prizes for officers and one for the ladies, these awarded in an amusing elimination dance in which the officers took part in a new version of "musical chairs," wearing absurd feminine headgear.

Miss Cristina Michels, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels, recently elected a member of the dance committee, was among the members of the younger diplomatic set attending the party.

Mrs. French Myers headed the receiving line, and others in the group assisted. A Thanksgiving supper—or snack, as the committee members prefer to call it—was served shortly before the final dance.

Here From Texas

Mrs. W. L. Bartley, wife of Col. Bartley of Fort Worth, Tex., has arrived in Washington to spend two weeks with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lowrey at their home in Georgetown.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

"GOOD HUNTING"—almost as much so as in other days—has been taking over its share of the calendar in this section recently. Up until Thanksgiving crowds riding to the hounds have been much smaller than in pre-war days, but with a number of girls from Foxcroft School joining the Middleburg Hunt on Thanksgiving morning, the event was very much in the old-time tradition.

Miss Charlotte Noland entertained at a breakfast following the hunt, and at 2 p. m. the annual basket ball game between the "Foxes and Hounds" went on the schedule. Many parents of the Foxcroft girls were in Middleburg to see their daughters take part in the festivities of the day. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Fossit, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hutton of Westbury, Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Looram, of Brooklandville, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Curtis McGraw of Princeton, N. J.; Mrs. David Bowes-Lyon and Mrs. Leland Harrison of Washington.

Others in Middleburg for recent visits were Mrs. George P. Metcalf of Providence, R. I., and her sister, Mrs. Ernest Levering of Boston, who are staying at the Red Fox Tavern in Middleburg, and Mrs. Thomas Furness of Lake Forrest, Ill.

DR. AND MRS. George Bolling Lee of New York are spending the weekend at their Virginia home, Ravensworth, near Fairfax, where they have been joined by their daughter, Miss Mary Lee, and their son, Pvt. Robert E. Lee 4th, USA, who is on furlough from duty at Governor's Island.

Miss Janet Roszel of Baltimore, who has been a recent visitor in Middleburg, has joined the WAC and will leave today for Des Moines, where she will start training . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brundage are being congratulated on the arrival of a son at Loudoun County Hospital. The child has been named Robert, jr. . . . Lieut. and Mrs. Henry Cochran Skinker had their daughter, Priscilla, christened at Grace Episcopal Church, The Plains, on Sunday afternoon. The Rev. D. Campbell Mayers, of Middleburg, officiated. Miss Betty Kinker Kernan was godmother, and godfather was the baby's uncle, Aviation Cadet Peter Macy, who could not be present. Frederick Sharpe, jr., stood proxy for him. After the christening a number of guests attended the informal reception at the home of Mrs. Skinker's sister, Mrs. John Rawlings, where Lieutenant and Mrs. Skinker and the baby have been spending his leave . . . Lieutenant and Mrs. Skinker left later for Camp Barkley, Texas, where he has been assigned to duty.

Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Walsh of Bluemont, Va., celebrated the christening of their son, Alexander Dunne, recently at St. John's Church, Leesburg. Godparents were the child's aunt, Miss Mary Syd Walsh and his cousin, John Stuart Bentley.

ANNOUNCEMENTS have been received by many Virginians of the recent marriage of Miss Mildred Kirtley McKay and Robert Mackay Stribling, AUS, which took place on Saturday, November 6, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Alexandria. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Francis McKay, of Alexandria, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Stribling of Markham, Va.

The Town Talks, and Talks; Any Party Proves That—Especially a Recent, Gala Reception

By Jean Craighead

Conversation is Washington's favorite indoor sport, and almost any Capital gathering presents a cross-section of talk that is indicative of the thoughts of the Nation.

Take the reception at the new Navy League headquarters the other day, for example. Any guest in a note-making mood could have gone home with a book full of comments on every subject under the sun—from the Battle of Tunisia and the whereabouts of the Peruvian fleet to the plight of women without men and the possibilities that the new Navy League headquarters may turn into one of the town's chief social centers.

Here's just a Capital kaleidoscope of a few subjects touched on, a few discussions overheard, as the party went merrily along from 5 to 7 p. m., and admirals continued to arrive in droves, along with a number of other distinguished guests:

British Officer, Actor, Jockey There

Maj. Edward Underdown of the Royal Worchester Yeomen, who is a playwright, an accomplished actor of Noel Coward's comedies and an amateur jockey, recalled not footlights and horse races but light from battery artillery and the race across the desert with the Eighth Army to Tunisia.

"The wide scorching desert," he said, "was a vivid experience. Excitment ran high as we closed in toward the American Seventh Army and Tunisia to bottleneck the Germans. Some divisions raced to the finish, and, although celebration at the meeting was not prevalent, spirits were high as the first milestone of victory was laid." Major Underdown is now in Mississippi enjoying the old South and football games between his lectures to trainees there. One evening at a football game, he related, "the band heard that I was among the rooters and struck up 'God Save the King.' Never was I moved so deeply by any tribute."

Peruvian an Ensign in USN

Son of the Secretary of the Peruvian Navy, Ensign Federico Diaz, easily precipitated conversation about the US Navy, which he joined several months ago. Military secrets checked his enthusiasm somewhat, but his gusto about the guns he mans spread through the Navy gathering around him with a loud "Yo!"

"I come from a long line of navy men," he laughed, "my father, my grandfather and ad infinitum. For quite a while I served with the Peruvian fleet and then decided to join the United States Navy." Reasons, a military secret, or at least, a Diaz secret.

Mrs. Herbert Newman was worried about the manless women of the Nation, and emphatically advised young girls not to marry until the men come home from the battlefields and the selection is better.

"It's a bad time for young women," she declared moodily; "by the time you meet a good one he's gone. How will the young women ever find out whether he's a good horseman or not, with so much shifting."

Turkey Was Topic Of Conversation

Former Representative Katharine Byron cemented personal and national relations with her talk that ranged all the way from "How do you do" to where the tax bill was headed and how.

The majority of the conversation, however, was the turkey eaten or anticipated, and what a brilliant setting the redecorated house at 1622 21st st. made for the holiday gathering.

In fact, one admiral commented as he stroked the baroque bar and glanced at two plaster can-can dancers, "I think this is going to be a field for many brilliant engagements. I like the bar and the green drapes; the food is good, and the company is wonderful." At that his hand came down on the shoulder of a Navy captain who is a member of the League. "When is the next party?" he asked, "I haven't been able to hear enough, and there are many people I'd like to know better."

So the admiral voices the opinion of everyone present: "When is the next engagement?" Washington society wants more of this spacious and colorful setting, and the success of the reception indicates that they'll get it.

Purely Personal

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi left yesterday for New York City, where they will stay for a week. They are stopping at the Ritz-Carlton.

Dr. Kemper Simpson entertained at an informal party last night at his home on M st., having among his guests Miss Elsa Maxwell and Miss Dickey Fellowes Gordon of New York, who came to Washington especially for Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's Thanksgiving luncheon.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth will return to Washington early next week to open her house for the season. She spent Thanksgiving Day in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., with her daughter, Miss Pauline Longworth, a student at Vassar.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith will give a party at their home this evening. Among the invited guests are Col. and Mrs. W. E. McReynolds, Lieut. William O. Antozzi, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lathrom and Mrs. Belle Tierney.

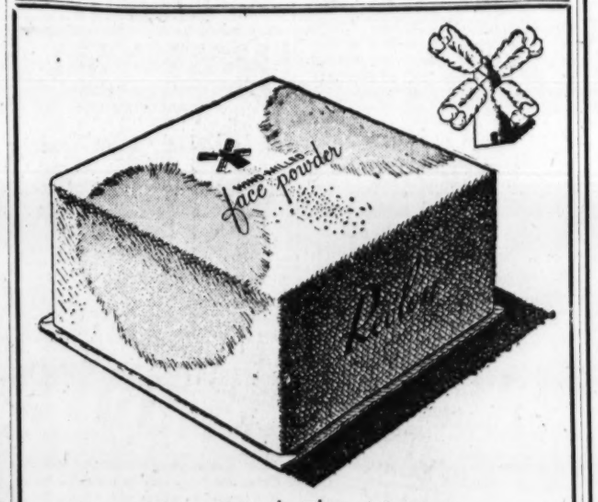

Lieut. and Mrs. Luther Matthew Bolton entertained at dinner last evening at the Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Benjamin Dunlap Hill, Miss Cynthia Hill and Miss Devereaux Green have returned from a visit in New York. They went there to attend the opening of the Metropolitan Opera, this year celebrating its Diamond Jubilee.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Prizer of Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J., and their daughter, Miss Isabel Prizer, are visiting their son, Lieut. John C. Prizer, jr., here.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Senator Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, is conducting a one-man investigation of the most novel type of lend-lease aid so far to come to light—diapers for Arab babies.

Bridges wants to find out why, at a time when American mothers are having some difficulty getting diapers for their own infants, we have shipped the equivalent of 690,000 diapers to the Free French in North Africa for distribution among the Arabs.

The textiles division of the Lend-Lease Administration sent one shipment of 450,000 yards of diaper cloth—equal to about 600,000 diapers—and another shipment of 90,000 ready-made "didies" to North Africa early this year.

Lend-Lease officials contend that we will be compensated in full for this and other materials sent to the Free French. Also, that the "didy" shipments were approved by the War Production Board and General Eisenhower on the ground that this contributed to the "economic rehabilitation" of the North African area.

However, Senator Bridges plans to ask some blunt questions the next time Lend-Lease spokesmen appear before the Appropriations Committee. There is a suspicion that the American diapers weren't used on Arab infants, but were allocated to Arabic tribesmen for headwear.

CIO-Rubber Fight

MEMBERS OF UNITED RUBBER Workers (CIO) are worried over construction of a new tire manufacturing plant in Waco, Texas. This is an innovation which may end tight labor control of wages and working conditions in Akron, Ohio.

Practically every big tire company asked WPB approval for new plant construction to meet the demand for production of synthetic tires. But rubber workers accused the industry of trying to break the wage levels by moving to cheap-labor areas. Ex-Rubber Director Bill Jeffers supported them, told the companies to go home and revise their "fantastic" plans for expansion.

Today, Bill Jeffers is gone, and the tide is turning. General Tire and Rubber has been granted permission to build a new 3 million dollar plant at Waco, Texas. And the industry generally is spending big money in an advertising campaign to sell the idea of expansion.

Most of them want to move south, partly for cheaper labor, partly to be near raw materials. Synthetic rubber is being produced almost entirely below the Mason-Dixon line, in plants at Institute, W. Va., Baton Rouge, La., Port Neches, Tex., and Los Angeles.

The companies are under terrific pressure to increase production of tires, and in turn they are putting pressure on the union and on the rubber director's office to speed up production of the individual worker and let more workers come into the industry.

Though this fight has not broken into headlines, it is one of the bitterest struggles in the labor-management field today.

Japanese-American Sailors?

NOW THAT JAPANESE-AMERICANS are being released from relocation centers, War Shipping Administration has discovered that a sizable number of these men are experienced seamen and could be put to good service aboard United States merchant ships.

The total number of experienced men is about 400. This is a difficult question, but seamen are desperately scarce, and all these men have been cleared by FBI and Army Intelligence. War Shipping is ready to assign them to ships, but the Navy Department stands in the way.

The Navy official in this case is Lieut. Comdr. Harold A. Burch of Naval Intelligence. He is the same man who got up a file of complaints on United States merchant seamen and turned it over to Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee without giving War Shipping a chance to answer or investigate the criticism first. Burch also took "Communists" off the crews of merchant ships going to Murmansk, Russia.

In the Japanese case, WSA is willing to stand by Navy's decision, and if Navy says the Nisei cannot sail, that's the end of it. But at least WSA wants a decision. So far, the Navy is stalling.

Feast Day Set New Attendance Fashion; Dunninger Plans to Baffle the Critics

IT WAS NOT LIKE THAT in the "good old days" . . . I mean those lockout crowds at the picture houses as early as 1 p. m., on Thanksgiving Day . . . Was a time, not so long ago, when no one thought of opening his house before 3 p. m., account of because earlier than that you could throw a piano around the place with no danger of hitting anyone . . . One local management I know almost made the mistake of clinging to past tradition on Thursday . . . Would have lost a few thousand dollars if it had . . . All of which lays additional emphasis on the fact that in present-day Washington there are a tremendous number of people, who, as we remarked a day or two ago, have nowhere to go but out . . . One suspects that the beauteous Marie Nash is introducing her song cycle, at the Earle, with "They're Either Too Young or Too Old" in compliment to Bette Davis, costarred with Miriam Hopkins in "Old Acquaintance," the current screen feature . . . That is Bette's song in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," still circulating around the neighborhoods . . . Remember? . . . By the way, Roger, is it all right with you, Marie's singing that song? . . . "Jeannie," in which everyone ought to be interested—and most everyone seems to be—is still soaring along at the Little, taking the play away from both "The Baker's Wife" and "The Informer," heretofore Ninth Street's top grossers . . . And please, Mr. Compositor, don't spell it "grocers"! . . . M-G-M's head man, Louis B. Mayer, no doubt will be looking down his nose the next time he meets Jack L. Warner, one of his closest competitors . . . Snatched 19-year-old Joy Page out of bit parts in Warner Brothers films to play the second feminine lead in a forthcoming super-duper under the Leo-the-Lion trade mark . . . Nothing unusual, except that Miss Page happens to be the daughter of Mrs. Warner and her former husband, Actor Don Alvarado . . . The charge probably could be kidnaping, if there were going to be any charge.

Leave Your Mind Home

A seat in the back of the house won't help you evade Dunninger's mind-probing, when he comes to Loew's Capitol next Thursday to headline the stage bill . . . Distance is no bar to this extraordinary mentalist . . . On his Monday night broadcast from Chicago over the Blue Network, for example, he will put his long-distance telepathy to a severe test . . . Will call a congressman in Washington, record his thoughts on certain matters and seal them in an envelope . . . Judges then will call the solon and receive the information verbally . . . Dunninger's transcript then will be verified, or not, as the case may be . . . Hope it works . . . And I'm not abashed by the special demonstration the mental wizard plans for the drama desks here next Wednesday afternoon, either . . . As far as I am concerned, personally, he can go as far as he likes . . . My mind's always a blank . . . Ask anybody . . . "America Dances." Edwin Strawbridge's historical ballet for children, opens the season of the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York at the National this morning at 10:30 . . . Has folklore musical background—"Turkey in the Straw," "Sheep and Goats," "Little White Donkey" and such, not overlooking even the Indian tom-tom and the cakewalk . . . Will be a sellout . . . Next attraction in series, "Cinderella," at 10:30 a. m., Tuesday after Christmas, December 28, also at the National . . . The veteran Reginald Denny is about to make or break himself in the eyes of at least one important associate . . . Will impersonate Director S. Sylvan Simon, in charge of filming "Song of the Open Road" for Charles R. Rogers . . . That could be where Denny will wind up—without the song—in case Simon no like . . . A former stage actor, Director Simon pleads camera shyness . . . Didja ever!

Work for Everyone

The War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of D. C., is lending full support to the campaign for recruiting 15,000 block leaders to enforce the many important war services on the home front . . . Local theaters this week are showing screen trailers devoted to the activities of the Civilian War Services Divison, Harry P. Somerville executive director . . . Demand is increasingly urgent as more and more selectees are inducted . . . Block leaders, not block-busters! . . . Producer Harry Joe Brown is taking no chances with his film version of "Knickerbocker Holiday," the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical in which Walter Huston starred on the stage . . . Recently screened completed footages for an invited audience of a Hollywood newsboy, soldier, woman Marine, teacher at U. C. L. A., streetcar motorman, high school girl, shipyard riveter, jive orchestra leader, housewife, butcher, department store head and an out-of-town newspaperman unaccustomed to Hollywood's daily diet of pictures . . . Their reactions will serve as guide in completing the pictures to the taste of mass audiences . . . Harry Anger's next stage bill at the Earle will be a "Chinese Carnival"—in "four dazzling scenes of beauty, color and melody, blended into a glorious revue, etc." . . . Lena Horne, M-G-M songstress, currently in "Thousands Cheer," lives on Horn Avenue in Hollywood . . . Not that it matters.

Bulletins From the Broadway Sector

New York, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Merriwether Gilmer still writes the "Dorothy Dix" column, although she is over eighty. Mrs. Gilmer, who was one of the first lady crime reporters in the newspaper business, has been giving advice to the lovelorn of more than two generations . . . Carleton Smith, the music critic, visited her and asked whether the business of advising girls has changed much during all these years. "When I first began to write the Dorothy Dix column," replied Mrs. Gilmer, "the girls used to ask whether it's proper to help a gentleman off with his coat. Now they want to know if it's proper to spend a week-end with him."

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD

David Wark Griffith, the veteran Hollywood producer and director, has been spending the past six months planning a film biography of Dr. George Washington Carver, the late great Negro scientist who was born a slave, was elected to a fellowship in the Royal Society of England and won the Roosevelt Medal for distinguished service in science . . . Col. Bill O'Dwyer, who was reelected unanimously as Brooklyn's District Attorney, notified the staff last week that there will be no changes . . . Dowsley Clark, of Minneapolis is slated to become chief of the News Bureau at OWI . . . Robert E. Sherwood left to visit MacArthur.

The story is being told of a modern New York waiter who suddenly was drafted, given some quick training and transported overseas. He was assigned to an anti-aircraft battalion in Italy While they were being attacked by Nazi bombers, the captain called for the waiter-soldier and said: "Rush down to the supply depot and bring me some 20-mm. shells," . . . "Yes sir," he replied, walked away, and returned with 16-mm. shells. "But I ordered 20-mm. shells, and you brought 16-mm.," the captain reminded him . . . "Yes, sir," shrugged the waiter-soldier. "But you gotta realize there's a war going on."

Senator Mead is writing a book about the round-the-world trip he recently took with four other Senators . . . Ernie Pyle's contract for the movie adaptation of his book, "Here Is Your War," provides that the final shooting-script is to be submitted for approval to his friend, Lowell Mellett . . . Neil Sullivan, of Pathe, was walking past the Naples postoffice when it was destroyed by a time-bomb. He was thrown into the air and fell under a half-track. Eric Barrow, of British Universal, finished taking his own news-reel shots, then saw Sullivan's camera lying on the street, and took the pictures for his wounded colleague.

The laundry situation in New York has brought about a sartorial innovation, indulged in surreptitiously by those two men-about-town, William Rhinelander Stewart and Gilbert Miller. They've kept it a secret, lest the popularity of the practice result in price-increase or a scarcity of the product. Both Stewart and Miller, who for years have been wearing starched white collars, now wear paper ones which cost four cents each. When the collar becomes dirty, after one wearing, it's turned inside out and is worn a second time. Then it's discarded. Cost, two cents per wearing, and no laundry problem. And, so far, no one has noticed any difference.

Lady Mendl decries any suggestion that a principal character in Ilka Chase's book, "In Bed We Cry," was patterned after her. "It's ridiculous," says Lady Mendl, "because never, never in my life, have I cried in bed" . . . Si Gerson, of the Daily Worker, looks with disdain upon one of the new Red Councilmen. He describes him as "one of the nouveaux roughs."

Capital Transit Net Dives 46% During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of the Capital Transit Co. slumped 46.3 per cent in October as the passenger load showed further signs of levelling off during the month.

In the monthly report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, the Transit line showed net income of $119,729 for October as compared with $222,922 in the same 1942 month.

Revenue passengers carried during October totaled 34,195,749, a gain of 4.9 per cent over the corresponding month last year. This was the smallest increase in fares experienced this year and continues the levelling off trend noted since traffic reached a peak in May.

Operating revenues for the month totaled $2,293,347, a small gain over the $2,269,373 in the like 1942 month. Operating expenses were 8.3 per cent higher, taxes dipped 2.2 per cent and provision for depreciation was 16 per cent higher.

For the first 10 months this year, Capital Transit reported net income of $1,329,087 against $1,556,052 or a decrease of 14.6 per cent. On the other hand, revenue passengers in the period increased 23.3 per cent, reaching an all-time high of 348,028,632.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Pennsy's Net Slumps

Net railway operating income of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. totaled $8,111,155 in October, a decrease of $11,576,779 as compared with the same month last year. Passenger revenues gained $5,033,976 during the month, but freight revenues dropped $1,479,490. Operating expenses soared $10,203,704 and taxes were $5,666,437 heavier.

For the first ten months this year, Pennsy's net income was $106,789,022, down $9,363,592 from the comparable 1942 period.

B. & O. Net Off in Month

Operating revenues of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for October were $31,432,541 or $1,912,754 greater than during October, 1942, the company announced yesterday. The net income for October, after payment of all charges, amounted to $2,500,965, a decrease of $1,882,194 over the same month of 1942.

For the first 10 months of this year the net income, after deduction for all charges, was placed at $35,449,226, an increase over the corresponding months of 1942 of $8,201,457.

Retail Sales Record Seen

Despite many shortages, retail stores will do a record $62,900,000,000 volume of business this year—$5,100,000,000 higher than 1942 and $7,300,000,000 above 1941.

The Commerce Department reported that a "substantial part" of the increase would result from higher prices, but total sales in "constant dollars"—that is, with allowance for price changes—still would be above the 1942 level, but off from the 1941 peak.

The constant dollar total for the year is estimated at $47,600,000,000, compared with $47,100,000,000 a year ago and $51,400,000,000 in 1941.

Rail Issue Authorized

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized the Atlanta and Charlotte Air Line Railway to issue $15,000,000 of first mortgage 3¾ per cent bonds, and $7,850,000 of second mortgage 3¾ per cent bonds in connection with the retirement of outstanding obligations.

The Southern Railway was authorized to assume obligation for the interest on the new bonds. The first mortgage bonds will be sold at 99.039 per cent of par and accrued interest from November 1, and the proceeds used to pay in part outstanding bonds totaling $20,000,000, which mature next July 1.

Whisky Dividend Enjoined by Court

Detroit, Nov. 26 (AP).—A second restraining order enjoining the Tom Moore Distilling Co. of Baltimore from paying a scheduled dividend in liquor was signed in Circuit Court today by Judge James E. Chenot. The petition for the order was filed by Bernard J. Ratigan, who said he was the owner of 2,353 shares of the company's common stock and represented other stockholders owning approximately 32,000 shares.

Last week Mrs. Esther Liebling, of Detroit, a stockholder, obtained a similar order to halt a proposed distribution of 27 gallons of whisky per share of stock. Hearing on the injunction was set for December 6.
